Ram Cat Alley Historic District
Name of Property
Oconee County, South Carolina
County and State

The Ram Cat Alley Historic District is a collection of twenty-one commercial buildings in the downtown area of Seneca, South Carolina, a town in eastern Oconee County. The district is centered on Ram Cat Alley and also includes properties on North Townville Street. Eighteen buildings contribute to the character of the historic district, while three buildings and one vacant lot are noncontributing. The contributing properties reflect the development of the downtown area as the center of commerce in Seneca and the surrounding county from ca. 1887 to ca. 1930.

The following properties contribute to the character of the Ram Cat Alley Historic District (inventory numbers correspond to the accompanying district map):

RAM CAT ALLEY

- 1) Patterson Building, 106 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This two-part, one-story brick veneer building, laid in running bond, features four pointed-arched, louvered ventilators above which are two elongated, rectangular brick panels. The left bay of the commercial storefront has a typical recessed and canted inset entrance with flanking display windows, while the right bay contains a brick bulkhead and a triple arcaded glass inset; both bays have a soldier course lintel.
- 2) Herbin Building, 109 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This one-story building features a multi-colored brick facade with an elongated panel surrounded by vertical header and rowlock courses. A soldier course divides the storefront and upper facade. The storefront consists of a recessed and divided entrance accessing both shops featuring Mission style wood and glass doors and canted display windows. The facade is capped with a concrete coping. This building was originally a general store.
- 3) Harper and Jones Building, 113 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1897): This two-part, two-story brick commercial block features two flush storefronts with glazed entrance doors flanking a central brick pier and divided plate glass display windows and divided light transoms. The second story has two sets of paired windows with six-over-six light, double-hung sash and segmental arched heads. It also features a single, elongated brick panel with projecting surround above both window sets. A double corbeled course is still visible at the top of the facade. This building was a general store operated by J.W. Harper and a grocery store at the turn of the twentieth century.
- 4) C.F. Adams General Store, 112 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1920): This one-story brick building features brickwork in seven-to-one American bond and is topped with a granite coping above a crenelated and triple-pedimented parapet. The upper facade is decorated with three glazed terra-cotta lozenge-shaped motifs corresponding to the three pediments above, and ten glazed terra-cotta square rosettes, and a white glazed terra cotta soldier course above the three bay facade. The storefront a central-bay recessed and canted entrance and flanking glazed and paneled side bays (a later alteration). This building was originally a general store operated by C.F. Adams.

- 5) Phinney Building, 111 Ram Cat Alley (1930): This one-story stuccoed brick building features on the lower portion of its facade a typical central entrance with canted recess and flanking display windows. The upper portion has a recessed panel with inset marble datestone, while the entire facade is flanked with stuccoed piers extending above the parapet. These, as well as the remainder of the facade are capped with a cast stone coping.
- 6) Cafe, 115 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1897): This one-story brick building features an inset entrance on the storefront with flanking display windows. The upper portion of the facade includes a rectangular panel with rat-tooth corbels and two square ventilators. Steel beams are also visible above the storefront inset. This building has been a restaurant for most of its existence.
- 7) Fred Hopkins's Meat Market, 117 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1908): This two-story brick building's facade features on its second story three two-over-two light, double-hung sash windows with segmental arched heads, three elliptical ventilators, and a recessed rectangular brick panel. The first-story consists of a glass storefront with recessed entrance and display cases. A steel beam is visible just over the storefront. The first floor was originally Fred Hopkins's Meat Market, while the second floor served as Hopkins's residence. The locals gave this section of Main Street the name Ram Cat Alley because the meat and fish at Hopkins's market attracted so many cats to this section of downtown Seneca.
- 8) P.C. Skelton Grocery, 120 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This two-part, two-story building features a painted brick facade. The second story of the facade contains three windows with one-over-one light, double-hung sash, cast stone window sills and lintels, three corresponding elliptical-shaped louvered ventilators, and corbeled blocks at either extremity of the facade's parapet. The commercial storefront, divided from the upper portion of the facade with a soldier course, features a double-leaf glass-paneled entrance within a shallow inset entrance, flanking display windows, a recessed stair entrance accessing the upper floor at the far right, and a prismatic glass transom spanning the entire commercial bay. The building was originally a grocery store operated by P.C. Skelton and was the first grocery in Seneca to deliver to customers' homes.
- 9) Little Star Cafe and Taylors Market, 121 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This one-story brick building features one glass storefront and one enclosed storefront and has a decorative recessed panel with brick rat-tooth corbels on the upper portion of the facade. The building was originally a cafe and a grocery store.

- 10) Harper and Patterson Building, 122 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This one-story brick building features eight-to-one American bond. The upper part of the facade contains two elongated brick panels with slightly protruding surrounds, four elliptical louvered ventilators and a flat central pediment. The lower part of the facade consists of two storefronts divided by a central brick pier, with a soldier course separating it from the upper portion. The left (eastern-most) storefront contains two double-leaf glass doors while that on the right (western-most) has a recessed central entrance and flanking divided light display windows and glazed transoms. This building was originally Harpers 5&10 Cent Store and the L.C. Patterson General Store. The Harpers 5&10 Cent Store was the original store and headquarters of what became a successful regional chain.
- 11) Osborne Building, 124 A-C Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This one-story brick building features a seven-to-one variant of American bond. The building has a commercial storefront divided from the upper portion with a soldier course. It contains three entrances, the one at far left having a single-light transom and accessing the basement level, the one at right of center being recessed and accessing the main floor, and the one at far right, also recessed, accessing an upper level loft. The upper portion of the facade features an elongated recessed brick panel and a corbeled cornice.
- 12) Main Street Barber Shop, 125-A Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1887): This one-story brick building features brickwork in an American bond variant. It originally served as a barber shop, boarding house, and grocery in its first twenty-five years of existence.
- 13) Old Seneca Post Office, 126 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This one-story brick building features on the upper portion of its facade an elongated rectangular panel with slightly protruding brick surround, and a soldier course frieze and corbeled brick cornice. The lower storefront facade has a central inset entrance, wood arched panels over single-light display windows, pilasters and a pent roof, all of which is a modern alteration. The building was built by J.E. Harper and then sold to house the Seneca Post Office in 1921.

NORTH TOWNVILLE STREET

- 14) Nimmons and Field Building, 103 North Townville Street (ca. 1917): This one-story brick building features on the upper portion of its facade an elongated rectangular panel with slightly protruding surround, and a heavily corbeled corner blocks and cornice in the Romanesque Revival style. The commercial storefront is a modern plate glass variety with double-leaf central entrance. The building was originally built for W.P. Nimmons and later served as a general store specializing in tires made by E.H. Field.

- 15) Nimmons Building, 105 North Townville Street (1917): This large two-story brick corner building features on its North Townville Street facade a two-bay wide elevation with first level openings now brick-infilled and upper floor windows covered with corrugated metal. An inset corner entrance is interrupted only by a heavy brick pier. The Ram Cat Alley facade consists of some window enclosures on the first level and nine segmental arched nine-over-one, double-hung sash windows. The uppermost portion of both street facades boasts a highly articulated Romanesque Revival corbeled cornice. The building served as a large-scale farm supply store and housed Seneca's first freight elevator, capable of transporting carriages to the second story.
- 16) Austin Building, 119 North Townville Street (ca. 1920): This two-part, two-story commercial brick building features a running bond pattern with elaborate mitered-corner brickwork surrounding the building's two inset entrance commercial fronts, between which is a double-leaf glazed upper floor entrance with semi-circular arched prismatic glass transom. A cast stone belt course separates the two levels visually and serves as a continuous sill for the second level's one-over-one, double-hung sash windows. Each of the upper floor's four paired window sets contains stack-bond and soldier course surrounds. The building's parapet boasts four small cast or carved stone cartouche, above which are corresponding battlements. Basketweave brick panels, a central peaked pediment featuring a larger stone cartouche or crest, and a beveled cast stone peaked coping all adorn the uppermost portion of the facade. This building was originally the Seneca Pharmacy for sixty-two years and then the Hopkins Pool Room. The second floor served at one time as headquarters for the South Carolina Medical Association.
- 17) Richardson Theater, 121-123 North Townville Street (ca. 1920): This two-story, two-part brick building features decorative brickwork surrounding the two modern commercial storefronts. The stepped facade includes five one-over-one, double-hung sash windows on the upper level, soldier coursing and header bond brickwork, a simple cast stone drip moulding band, and an unadorned brick parapet with concrete coping. This was the first motion picture theater in Seneca.
- 18) Collins and Glenn Building, 125-127 North Townville Street (ca. 1917): This one-story brick building features a running bond brickwork and a simple corbeled cornice. 125 North Townville Street has a flushed commercial storefront with a double-leaf glazed door entrance at the far right, while that for 127 North Townville contains a cornered entrance with heavy brick corner pier.

The following properties do not contribute to the character of the Ram Cat Alley Historic District:

NORTH TOWNVILLE STREET

- 19) Citizens Bank Building, 111 North Townville Street (1905, extensively altered ca. 1960): This two-story yellow brick building features brick pilasters with limestone Corinthian capitals on both the first and second floor levels, large segmental arched windows with carved limestone drip mould. A full entablature, consisting of egg-and-dart moulding, an unadorned frieze, and a denticulated and modillioned cornice, still exists on both the North Townville Street and Ram Cat Alley facades. A simple parapet completes the historic facade. A two-story unsympathetic modern brick and veiled block addition protrudes from the corner of the building and renders it noncontributing. This building was originally a bank and a store on the first floor and an opera house on the second floor, but the facade and left elevation were extensively altered ca. 1960.

RAM CAT ALLEY

- 20) A.P. Grant and Company, 118 Ram Cat Alley (ca. 1917): This one-story, building has a simple, unadorned facade which is likely a replacement of an earlier one. The building has a modern glass storefront, and the facade is capped with a concrete coping. The building was originally a general store.
- 21) 123 Ram Cat Alley: Vacant lot where building once stood.
- 22) 105 North Townville Street Annex (ca. 1960): This one-story brick building, with its recessed entrance and flanking display windows, has a modern entrance and metal awning identical to that at the corner entrance of 105 North Townville Street (#15. Nimmons Building).

The Ram Cat Alley Historic District is significant as an intact public, commercial, and social center of the City of Seneca. The area is a collection of buildings associated with the commercial growth and development of Seneca from ca. 1887 to ca. 1930. The district is a typical example of architectural and commercial development around the growth of the railroad in a small South Carolina town in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Ram Cat Alley was so called because of the tendency of cats to gather around the Fred Hopkins Meat Market which was located on that street in ca. 1908.

Named for a tribe of Native Americans who once inhabited the northwest corner of South Carolina, the streets of Seneca City were laid out in 1873 at the junction of the Atlanta and Richmond Airline Railroad and the Blue Ridge Railway. After the town's incorporation in 1874, downtown Seneca (City was later dropped from the name) developed along a grid of streets located across from a central park area adjacent to the railroad depot. The area along Ram Cat Alley between North Townville and North Fairplay Streets eventually became the core of Seneca's commercial and social activity. Ram Cat Alley was home to various grocery stores and general stores, a theater, a pharmacy, a barber shop, and a bank.

Most early buildings in downtown Seneca were constructed of wood. After ca. 1887, as the town developed into an agricultural center for Oconee County, the wood structures began to be replaced with more elaborate brick buildings. Development continued into the mid-1920s along Main Street, Depot Street, and North First Street which now constitutes the largest commercial area in downtown Seneca. In the 1970s a bypass was built so that US Highway 76/123 would be diverted around the town of Seneca. This contributed to the economic decline of Seneca's downtown. In the 1990s, however, Ram Cat Alley has once again become a popular and important part of downtown Seneca.

Revitalization efforts have focused on Ram Cat Alley bringing new businesses and new life to the most architecturally intact part of downtown Seneca. This revitalization effort has returned Ram Cat Alley to its historic role as a center of commercial and social life in Seneca.¹
