Continuation SheetSection number 7 Page 1Description

The T. M. Ferguson House is a single-story, wood-frame residence constructed from 1900 to 1903 in the Plain Traditional style. Supported by a continuous stone foundation, the frame walls are clad with white-painted, lapped weatherboard. A low-pitched hipped roof, which is sheathed by two different types of metal depending on the elevation (ribbed with a standing seam and corrugated), covers the rectangular plan. There are two interior brick chimneys.

The front, or eastern, elevation features a central-bay, hipped-roof porch supported by a collection of posts, including two of the turned, Folk Victorian variety (one at the rear), one simple replacement post, and two builder-inspired composite posts at the corner consisting of two 2" X 4" boards with three pointed wood blocks placed in between. The central, single-leaf entrance is unadorned. Fenestration on this elevation is accomplished by two two-over-two double-hung windows on the wall north of porch and two one-over-one double-hung windows south of the porch.

The southern elevation consists of one boarded-over window near the eastern corner and a pair of one-over-one windows near the western corner. The rear, or western, elevation has a shed-roof porch supported by five wood posts extending from the southern half of the facade. There is a single door at each end of the porch and a one-over-one window in between. The northern half of the elevation is lighted by a two-over-two double-hung window and a small, bathroom-sized window. The northern elevation is identical to the southern elevation in arrangement; however, the paired windows have two-over-two sashes and the boarded-over window now emits a stove pipe.

The interior was not viewed.

Located on Canaan Street in Marshall, the T. M. Ferguson House is in fair condition.

Significance

This residence was constructed from 1900 to 1903 by T. M. Ferguson as a home for him and his wife, Malinda. Although possessing no historical significance, the T. M. Ferguson house is architecturally significant under Criterion C as the best example in Marshall of this particular Plain Traditional form with its charismatic hipped roof.
