Description

The Lattimer House is a two story, wood frame, Queen Anne Revival residence. Its hipped roof main block is augmented by several gable roof bays and projections, a shed roof wrap-around porch, a cantilevered spindlework balcony and other spatial components which reveal its irregular plan. A single exterior brick chimney is attached to the southern end of the western elevation. The roof material is composition shingle, the house is sheathed in weatherboard, novelty siding and imbricated shingles, and the foundation consists of brick piers with brick lattice in-fill.

The southern or main elevation is composed of a projecting gable bay to the west and the wall of the house to the east with its single story, shed roof corner porch which wraps around to the eastern elevation. The gable bay is decorated with imbricated shingles and decorative stick detail in the pediment, and punctuated only by a semi-circular, central louvered vent. Below, an elaborate, spindlework balcony is cantilevered out from the first story. The balcony is accessed via a single wood door set between single-pane half-sidelights. The door is lighted with a pair of arched, single-pane windows. The balcony is constructed of a variety of thin turned and sawn wood sticks which form both a balustrade and decorative cornice. The wall surfaces flanking the entry are covered with triangular imbricated shingles. Two central, paired one-over-one wood sash windows light the first floor below. A single one-over-one wood sash window lights the second story wall to the east and a triangular, gabled vent dormer is placed directly above. The porch below is entered from this elevation, as a low set of stairs leads to the entry in the first floor. A projecting bay at the southeast corner, which is lighted with a pair of one-over-one wood sash windows, is echoed by the pediment which projects from the otherwise shed roof porch. The porch on both sides is decorated with an array of turned balusters and posts and sawn brackets and other details. The wall behind is covered with novelty siding.

The eastern elevation is highlighted by the projecting, three-sided gable bay to the north. The gable pediment is of a configuration identical to that of the gable bay on the southern elevation. The two flanking sides of the bay are each fenestrated by a central one-over-one wood sash window on each floor, though the lower windows are slightly taller than those above. The south side of the gable bay is also lighted by a single one-over-one wood sash window on each floor, as is the wall of the second story to the south. A single story, recent shed addition finishes this elevation to the north.

The western elevation is blank except for the exterior brick chimney attached toward the southern end, a small triangular dormer just to the north above, and a window and entry near the northern end of the elevation on the first floor. The northern elevation consists of an original two story, projecting gable bay to the west with a recent single story, flat roofed, concrete block addition attached and single story, shed roof and hipped roof elements extending to the east. A central, one-over-one wood sash window lights the second story of the gable, a single one-over-one wood sash window lights the eastern wall of the shed addition and another lights the northern wall of the hipped addition.

The only alterations of note to the house are the single story additions to the northern side of the house. These are visible from the eastern side of the house, but they do not dominate the general appearance and historic impression of the building. They are invisible from the southern, main elevation.

The Lattimer House is in good condition.

Significance

Criterion C, local significance

The Lattimer House (Part E, Historic Context #3) is one of the finest examples in Searcy of a high-style Queen Anne Revival design, if not the finest example, and as such is reflective of the prosperity and growth experienced by the city of Searcy during this period. Its abundance of turned and sawn work, its irregular plan and elevations, and its emphasis on a variety of textures all recall the very essence of Queen Anne Revival design. Furthermore, all of these picturesque elements have been placed and proportioned in such a way as to appear neither frivolous nor eccentric. The Lattimer House stands as a sophisticated, ambitious and ultimately successful interpretation and celebration of the Queen Anne Revival style.
