The Horry-Guignard House is significant as being one of the oldest houses in Columbia and as a fine architectural example of Columbia's beginnings in an area which is now a governmental and cultural center.

Built before 1813, probably by Peter Horry - a Colonel in the Revolution and a Brigadier General of the South Carolina Militia. It was later the home of John Gabriel Guignard - Surveyor General of South Carolina from 1798 to 1802 - who laid out the plan for Columbia's streets.

The Horry-Guignard House now serves as headquarters for the Columbia Music Festival.
