Describe present and historic physical appearance.

Home Place Plantation is located on the southern side of the road leading from Midway to Ebenezer about two miles east of its intersection with State Highway #433 approximately six miles northeast of Benton, Mississippi. The plantation was established by Richard Swayze in 1832 as a 300-acre plantation and has increased to over a thousand acres - during five generations of Swayze ownership. The original plantation house is the nucleus of the plantation and is being nominated with the thirteen acres included in a deed to its present owner, John Swayze, great-great-grandson of Richard Swayze.

Home Place is a one-and-a-half story, frame, Greek Revival plantation house. The gable roof is flanked by outside-end brick chimneys (rebuilt) and is pierced on the front slope by three gabled dormers added during the mid-20th century. Originally a single, narrow gabled dormer was centered on both the front and rear slopes of the roof. An undercut gallery extends the full-width of the facade and is supported by molded box columns supporting a full molded entablature. The five-bay northwesterly facade is a symmetrical composition and is finished in horizontal tongue and groove boards with an early twentieth-century baseboard. An open passage, or dog-trot, originally occupied the center bay but was enclosed later in the nineteenth century by the installation of double-leaf doors with glazed upper panels in a narrowed opening. The doors are set beneath transoms on both the front and rear elevations but are flanked by sidelights only on the facade. The center-bay doorway is flanked by windows with unmolded backbands and drip caps that are filled with six-over-six, double-hung sash and are closed with original shutter blinds. Extending across the rear elevation is a narrow, shed-roof porch that was enclosed in the mid-20th century.

The interior features a double-pile plan with wide central hallway, a floor plan that is typical of mid-19th-century Yazoo County plantation houses recorded by the Works Progress Administration. The use of the dog-trot form, massive hewn beams, and interior horizontal-board walls in a house constructed in 1858-59 reflects the frontier character of Yazoo County at that time period. However, the house exhibits some sophistication in its use of shouldered architrave surrounds, molded four-panel doors, and molded baseboards. The staircase to the upper half story, which dates to the early 20th century and features square newels and rectangular-sectioned balusters, is entered in a short flight on the rear wall of the central hall. It makes two quarter turns at intermediate landings before opening into the second-story hallway. The original stair was probably a steep straight-run stair in approximately the same location. The physical evidence indicates that the upper half story was originally more plainly trimmed with unpainted board-and-batten doors, one of which survives under the rear eave. The house has undergone remodeling with successive generations of the Swayze family but basically achieved its present form by about 1930. Major changes include the remodeling of the upper half story, the installation of the present two-landing staircase at the rear of the hall, and the replacement of the original mantelpieces of the first story with brick chimney breasts with bracketed mantel shelves. The original mantelpieces may have been relocated to the upper half story when it was remodeled. An L-shaped rear wing and side porch were added to the easterly side of the house around 1900, and a side gabled addition was added to the westerly side elevation in the mid-20th century.

A small brick outbuilding with gabled roof, whose original function is unknown, is the only surviving dependency. The Swayze plantation cemetery is located southwest of the house within the nominated thirteen acres.

State significance of property, and justify criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above.

Home Place is significant as a typical example of mid-19th century, Yazoo County plantation architecture and as the home of pioneer settler Richard Swayze, whose family has owned the house for five generations. The house exhibits the common form of the Mississippi planter's cottage which is expressed as a one-and-a-half story frame residence with gable roof and undercut full-width gallery. When Richard Swayze moved from Adams County to Yazoo County and received title to his 300-acre plantation in 1832, he first built a log cabin dwelling that stood until recent years. The present house was built in 1858-59 and, according to family tradition, the builder was a slave named Charlie (John Swayze, great-great grandson of Richard Swayze, interviewed by Mary Warren Miller, preservation consultant, Miller Preservation Services, Natchez, Mississippi, at Benton, Mississippi, March 20, 1988). The use of the dog-trot form, massive hewn timbers, and interior horizontal-board walls reflects the frontier character of Yazoo County on the eve of the Civil War. The double-pile, central hall plan with larger front rooms is the most common plan for mid-19th-century, Yazoo County plantation houses recorded by the Works Progress Administration.

Richard Swayze was a descendant of the New Jersey Swayze family that immigrated to Adams County, Mississippi, in the 1770's and settled in the Kingston community, also known as the Jersey Settlement. The house passed from Richard Swayze to his son Hardy Sojourner Swayze, whose biographical sketch is found in Goodspeed's BIOGRAPHICAL AND HISTORICAL MEMOIRS OF MISSISSIPPI (Vol. II, pp. 870-71). Hardy Sojourner Swayze served in the Confederate Army in Company B, Withers Artillery and fought in the Vicksburg siege. He was taken prisoner at Port Hudson, paroled and exchanged, and was later again taken prisoner at Mobile and imprisoned at Ship Island. During Hardy Sojourner Swayze's ownership, the plantation grew from 320 acres to 1220 acres. Home Place passed from Hardy Sojourner Swayze to Carl Clayton Swayze and through Harris Sojourner Swayze to John Swayze, the present owner. Photographs of the five Sojourner men hang in the center hall of the house. The name of the house was changed from Champagne to Home Place by Carl Clayton Swayze (John Swayze, great-great grandson of Richard Swayze, interviewed by Mary Warren Miller).

Although John Swayze's deed to the plantation house includes only thirteen acres, the integrity of setting is outstanding as the house and thirteen acres are the nucleus of a Swayze plantation encompassing over 1200 acres. The house has been remodeled by earlier generations with substantial alterations dating prior to about 1920. Later alterations are restricted to the addition of a side wing and front dormers.
