Describe present and historic physical appearance.

The S.S. Peter & Paul Catholic School represents a good example of a parochial school building, being designed by architect William L. Steele. The contractor was B.E. Short, of Sioux City, Iowa. The contract was made and entered the 4th day of May, 1909. The building was constructed and built upon Block 8 in the West Addition of the Village of Butte. The completion date was the 13th day of October, 1909. Modifications to the building include brick infill to several window openings in the rear facade, and nonoriginal siding on the dormers.

The rectangular school is a two-and-one-half story Renaissance Revival style structure with a raised basement. The brick work was done by Steele Corporation of Sioux City, Iowa. The building has the attic was used for school dormitories and to four levels: house the school children; the first floor has a central hall and two large classrooms with double oak doors which opened into a chapel room, located between the classrooms, allowing the children in both classrooms to attend daily mass; the second floor contained a music room and sleeping quarters for the nuns, who taught the school; the basement was used for dining, cooking, and laundry facilities. The building has a central staircase with wooden banisters, starting on the first floor up to the attic floor. The building features a truncated, hipped roof penetrated by eight shingled dormers with hipped and shed rooflines, and a shingled belfry, a vent for air circulation, topped by a white metal cross. Fenestration in the building consists of flat and round arched openings with one-over-one double hung window units. Round arched brick window hoods and concrete sills are also used in the window treatment. There are two brick chimneys and a steel fire escape located on the west side of the school. The raised front entry has a shed roof overhang supported by large brackets, and shows double doors, sidelights, and brick banisters with concrete copings. There is one contributing structure, a storm cellar, located directly behind the school on the west side.

The original S.S. Peter & Paul church complex consisted of a frame church and rectory, and the brick school building. The original church building was replaced in 1969, and in 1990 a new X See continuation sheet rectory was completed. The school is the only remaining building of the original church complex. The school closed in 1969. Acquired by the Village of Butte in 1990, the building is now in the process of being restored for use as a community center and museum.

State significance of property, and justify criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above.

The S.S. Peter & Paul Catholic School is a typical example of the multi-story, brick, "fireproof" parochial school buildings that were constructed in virtually every Catholic community in Nebraska, during the first quarter of the twentieth century. These schools were, and are, a symbol of community permanence and progressive interest in parochial education. As a "property type" (parochial school) the building features all the characteristics of a period parochial school: chapel, housing for students who (because of home locations) would have boarded at the school, and nuns quarters, for the nuns who taught the school.

Criteria Consideration A is applicable and is met through the property deriving primary significance under education. The period of significance is derived from the year (1909) when the building began operation as a school.

S.S. Peter & Paul Catholic School is significantly associated with parochial education in Boyd County, as it was the only Catholic School (grades 1 through 8) built in the county. It was constructed through funds raised by the parishioners of S.S. Peter & Paul Catholic Church. It is the only remaining building of the original church complex, which consisted of a church, rectory, and school.

In the Nebraska Historic Buildings Survey (NEHBS) of Boyd County, a total of four school properties, including S.S. Peter & Paul Catholic School, were identified in The Topical Listing of Boyd County Historic Properties. The remaining three school buildings (BD00-167, BD00-172, and BD04-1), all dating from the turn of the century, are one-story in height, of frame construction, and vacant. The public high school building in Butte (BD03-14), although identified in the NEHBS, was not included in
