DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Today low mounds mark the presidic's outline and still clearly reflect the shape drawn by Urrutia in 1766. Despite 200 years of occupancy, the building matches the map in orientation, layout and measurement. The north wing is about 100 feet long, the west 145 feet and the east wing 125 feet. After rains dark streaks appear in the soil showing where walls once projected above the surface. In a few places cobblestone foundations have been exposed by weathering. As soon as funds permit, the building will be excavated, stabilized and opened to public view as the State Park's main interpretive device.

As the Urrutia map shows, the guardroom was in the south end of the east wing. The Captain's house, according to Penry Dobyns, was in the northwest corner where the two-story tower stood, well into the 1900's. The building was of unfired adote bricks laid in adobe mud mortar. Cottonwood or pine poles spanned the rather narrow rooms at close intervals. Ocotillc and willow wands, then grass, then packed dirt, completed the roof.

Doris Bents states that the garrison quarters and fertifications were completed under Capt. Beldarrain's direction, thus built before Anza's arrival in 1760. Construction seems to have been definitely complete by 1766 when the Rubi' inspection party reached Tubac. As was and is typical of adobe structures, the building required frequent repairs to offset the effects of erosion and weather.

The presidio at Tubac was atypical in that it enclosed a much smaller area than was usual for presidics built a few years later; it did not include the church and the larger houses nearby. This may reflect the confidence and sense of mastery felt by the Spaniards in the 1750's. By 1794, however, a "defensive wall" had been completed which seems to indicate an erosion of the effectiveness of presidial troops in enforcing the peace. This wall has not been identified on the ground as yet.

The bulk of the presidio building is owned by the Arizona State Parks Board. However, approximately one-third of the west wing and the southern end of both east and west wings are owned by Tubac School District No. 5.

Note: Only the site of the Presidio is here nominated; not any structures adjacent to, or upon, the site, NNO_{I} EE INSTRUCTION

The Tubac Presidio, oldest of the three Spanish military outposts built in Arizona, was established as a reaction to the Pima Indian rebellion of 1751. The bulk of the Pimas and Papagos were easily kept cowed by the company of leather jacketed lancers; the major military opponents were, from the first, the Apaches, Sumas, and Janes to the northeast and the Serie of the Gulf coast. Tubac's caralrymen and Piman auxiliaries took part in dozens of patrols into enemy country and were responsible for the measure of peace and security that existed in southern Arizona.

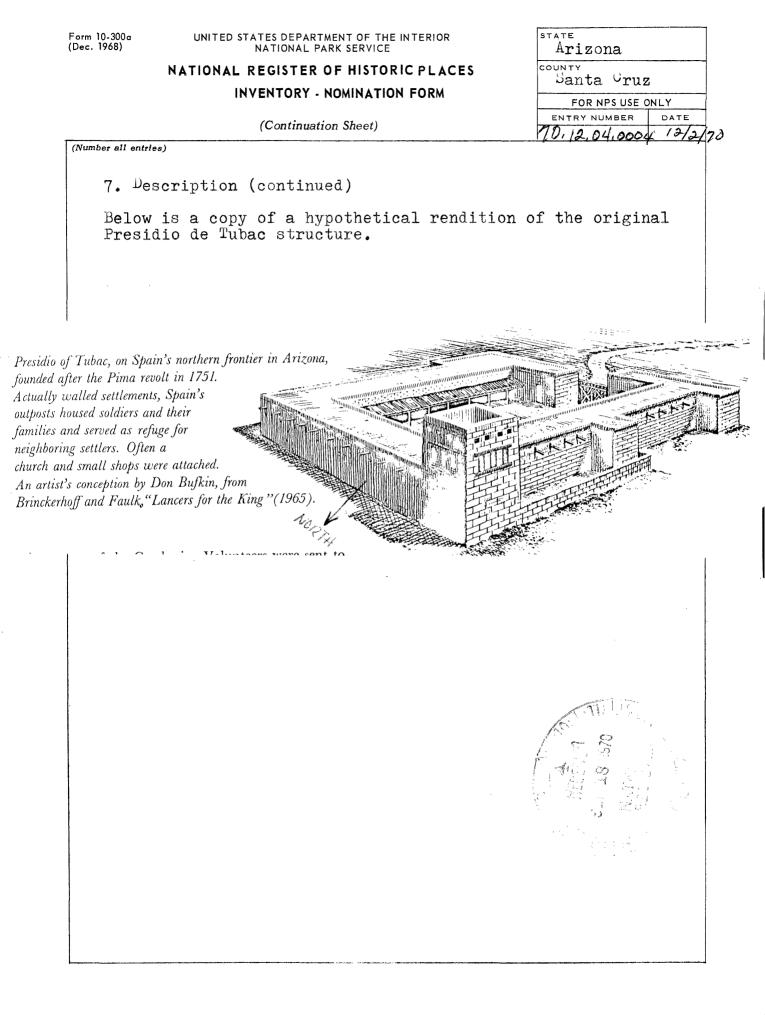

The town of Tubac grew up around this military outpost and has been occupied with only short breaks until the present. This is a standard variant of the Spanish pattern of expansion-a military outpost serving as the nucleus for farming, ranching, trading and even some mining activity nearby. The Toribio de Otero grant, made in 1797, typifies the attractive force of land titles -- Otero descendants still live in the area. Other names that appeared in records of the 1700's can still be found in the Santa Cruz Valley. Indirectly, the presidio made a lasting imprint on the cultural and ethnic complexion of Southern Arizona.

Captain Juan Bautista de Anza commanded this presidio for fifteen years. He is famous for his exploration of a route linking Sonora with California in 1774 and, from the staging point of Tubac Presidio, for conducting a party of colonizers to Monterey in 1776. Members of this group made the initial settlement in the San Francisco Bay region -- Anza is given credit for "founding" San Francisco. He was an outstanding example of the frontier aristocracy which, while dominating much of the economic life of the area, also served in essential positions of leadership.

During the late 1850s, the presidio buildings were taken over by the Arizona and Sonora Exploring and Mining Company which was under the direction of Charles D. Poston. Until the outbreak of the Civil War and the withdrawal of U.S. troops from the area, the old presidio building served as the supply center and beadquarters for mining operations scattered over a twenty-mile radius. Poston, as a deputy clerk of court of Dons Ame County, New Mexico, served as the "government" of Southern Arizona, recording titles, performing marriages, etc. In this sense, the Presidio was unofficial depitol of the area that is now Arizona.

8. Significance

The presidio's significance waned after the end of the Civil War. Anza's house was used by the Tubac Schoolteacher for a residence until after 1900. The east wing served as a free bestel for travelers and a kind of community guesthouse for visitors. Some of its adobes were removed to build houses in and around Tubac, including the present park ranger's residence. Until toppled to the ground to clear the site for a home that was never completed, the old Presidio's walls served as a "fort" for generations of children from the schoolyard next door.
