The fort site at Sulphur Trestle is located seven miles north of Athens, Alabama, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad line. The fort is south of Sulpher Creek and just west of the train tracks. About four hundred yards of trenches still remain and are in reasonable good condition. The fort and the houses were burned by General Nathan Bedford Forrest after the fort was surrendered to him.

In 1864 the fort was a square redoubt about 70 yards long on each side. The parapet was built of logs with several feet of hard-packed dirt on the outside. The fort was five or six feet high. A deep trench was dug around the parapet. Inside the fort were the powder magazine, officer's quarters, and sheds for supplies. South of the fort the enlisted men lived in tents.

A historic/recreational park is planned for the site.

✓ Sulphur Trestle Fort in Limestone County was the site of a major military action in September 1864 between Confederate General Nathan Bedford Forrest and the Union garrison guarding the railroad trestle over Sulphur Creek. ★

The Union Army had captured the Tennessee River Valley in 1862; however, their control was subject to numerous raids by Forrest, General Joe Wheeler and others. The North-South railroad from Nashville to Decatur was an important part of the supply line to General Sherman in Atlanta as it intersected the Memphis and Charleston railroad which went through Atlanta.

General Forrest left his headquarters in Verona, Mississippi on the 16th of September, 1864, with the mission of destroying the rail lines north of Decatur, Alabama. He crossed the Tennessee River near Florence and headed for Athens which was under the command of Colonel Wallace Campbell. General Forrest joined forces with General P. D. Roddy west of Together they had a 4,500 man fighting force. Forrest struck Rogersville. four miles south of Athens and destroyed the railroad tracks. On September 23, Forrest surrounded Athens. Colonel Campbell burned the commissary building and withdrew to his fort. Not wishing to attack Campbell's fort in a frontal assault, Forrest decided to try trickery. He requested an interview with Campbell and while they talked, Forrest paraded the same men and cannons past Campbell again and again and convinced Campbell that he had a large army. In his official report, Campbell estimated that there were more than 12,000 troops and 18 cannons lined up against him. Against seemingly overwhelming odds he surrendered.

After sacking the stores of Union sympathizers in Athens and sending his prisoners south, Forrest moved north and camped six miles above Athens on the night of the 24th.

The next Union outpost on the rail line was located at Sulphur Trestle an 80 foot high wooden bridge nearly 200 yards long. There were two blockhouses on the southern end of the bridge and a fort on a nearby hill. The fort was defended by two companies of black troops, the 11th U. S. Colored Troops und the command of Colonel Lathrop. The use of ex-slaves and free Negros was an experiment designed to free the regular Union troops for front line duties. Lanthrop was reenforced by 128 men of the Ninth Indiana Calvary under Colonel Lilly and 60 men of the Third Tennessee Regiment under Colonel Minnis. Lanthrop was ordered to "hold the fort at all hazards and to the last extremity."

On September 25, Forrest surrounded the fort and began shelling it. Colonel Lanthrop was killed at the start of the fight and was replaced by Colonel J. B. Minnis. At around nine a.m. Colonel Minnis was struck by a piece of shell and replaced by Colonel Lilly. When they arrived, Forrest sent General Buford out to meet them and to turn them back. At this point, Forrest demanded unconditional surrender which Lilly refused. Forrest then offered terms and Lilly took them to Colonel Minnis who had recovered sufficiently to resume command. Minnis held a council of war and all officers except Minis voted to surrender. Within an hour the terms were accepted. The Confederate had killed over 200 men and captured over 800 more as well as 700 small arms, 2 artillery pieces, 16 wagons, 300 horses and various stores.

Forrest had the trestle and fort burned and then moved North to Tennessee.
