DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Wakeley Tavern, also known as Old Ferry Farm, is situated on the Wisconsin River opposite Nekoosa. It is located at the end of a series of rapids and falls which made it a convenient stopping place for river travellers. Near the tavern stood Pointe Basse a florishing little village in the mid 1800s which became a ghost town in the 1870s when the railroad went through Nekoosa. The Wakeley tavern is the oldest extant building in the area. It was built in 1837 and is a simple two-story frame structure 20' x 30'. There is a hint of a Greek Revival pediment at each end of the house in the rather heavy cornices and the teturned eaves. Large Victorian porches which had been added at the front and rear of the house have been removed by the present owners to restore the house more to its original appearance. 'The present owners have also created French doors on the river side, but the east facade remains much as it must have originally appeared. On a large hill near the house Indian "sporting games" were held, and this hill serves as an Indian burial ground.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Wakeley Tavern is the oldest extant building in Wood County and the site of the christening of the first white child born in the county. The tavern was built by Robert and Mary Wakeley of Lake George, New York. The Wakeleys arrived in the area by water in 1837, having taken a lumber raft to Cincinnati, a steamboat up the Mississippi. a smaller boat to Portage, and a poled raft up the Wisconsin River. They were forced to stop at Pointe Basse by the rapids and realized that other travellers would be inclined to do likewise. Indeed, their tavern stood at a convenient place for both land and river travellers to break their journey. Not only did it stand at the foot of the rapids, it was also at one of the very few natural fording places in The tavern served as an inn and trading post for trappers, the river. hunters, Indians, lumbermen, traders and settlers. It was an overnight stop on the stagecoach route from Necedah to Stevens Point and was on the military road which ran north from Galena, Illinois. In the 1870s when Pointe Basse began to shrink in size and importance, Robert Wakeley established a cable ferry running from his backyard to Nekoosa, thus the name "Old Ferry Farm." The ferry operated until 1916 when the farm was sold as a private residence.

Wakeley's Tavern is a Wisconsin Registered Landmark.
