Howard Hotel, Brigham City, Box Elder County, UT

Narrative Description

The Howard Hotel is a prominent turn-of-the-century commercial block building centrally located in downtown Brigham City just south of the historic County Courthouse. The original building, constructed c.1903,¹ was a two-story, brick and adobe hotel. The hotel was expanded through the addition of a third story in 1914.² Subsequent alterations to the hotel have not significantly changed the hotel's overall appearance and it has maintained its historic integrity, remaining a well-recognized feature in downtown Brigham City.

The front elevation of this Neoclassical Revival style building is constructed of red brick with the first- and second-story sidewalls constructed of adobe and the third-story sidewalls of brick. Distinctive features and details reflecting its neo-classical character include a simple horizontal pressed metal cornice with brackets, large sash-style windows at the upper levels, and a central brick arch at the second level. The primary facade has a flat profile with the exception of the 1931 addition of a long, vertical sign positioned at the third level perpendicular to the building.³ The first floor incorporates historic plate-glass windows with transom lights.

The interior of the hotel has not been altered extensively. Much of the original fabric remains, though it is obscured by worn-out carpets, paneling on the walls, and debris cluttering the spaces. The first-floor lobby has had cedar siding installed over the original walls and the central staircase has been partially covered with drywall. The second floor is unaltered and the maple hardwood floors (under carpet), historic doors with transoms, bathroom fixtures, and steam radiators are all intact. The only permanent alteration is at the back or east end of the third floor where historic doors, moldings, and partitions were removed between 1974 and 1976 to create a private residence for the owner.⁴ New rooms were created in this space and the floors were covered with linoleum and carpet.

Changes to the building occurred in several phases throughout its existence. The original c.1903 two-story building had a symmetrical design. Prominent features of the facade included a corbelled, pressed metal cornice, a pediment centered within the cornice, and an arched window on the second floor. The 1907 Sanborn Map indicates that the floor plan was divided into two major sections, with a lobby in the north part of the first floor and a dining room in the south.⁵ The second floor housed 25 guest rooms.⁶

The 1914 remodeling changed the appearance of the building considerably increasing the number of hotel rooms to 50.⁷ The pedimented cornice was removed to add the third story and was replaced with a simplified bracketed cornice. Below the projecting eave of the cornice, brick pilasters were topped with decorative pressed metal capitals. A large wooden balcony spanning the width of the building was added. The balcony was supported by four posts and served as a main-entrance canopy for the hotel. Architect Carson Wells created an eclectic neo-classical appearance through the use of symmetry, capitals, and brackets.⁸

Subsequent changes to the building included the addition of a six-foot wide ground-level passageway to the north side of the building in May of 1923. This passageway served as a storage area and entry to the hotel's banquet hall. Built in conjunction with the Morgan building, it appears from the front to be part of the Morgan building, but is a part of the hotel.⁹

In 1925 changes to the facade reduced Carson Wells' neo-classical appearance. At that time, the manager, Robert H. Hoare, enlarged the cafe in the south side of the hotel front. He added a recessed door for street access to the cafe, decreasing the symmetry of the facade.¹⁰ In 1931 a large vertical sign was installed onto the front of the building.¹¹

In 1938, the support posts were removed from the balcony, and it was transformed into a marquee suspended from chains.¹² The tin capitals were later removed. The marquee was taken off in November of 1993.

By 1946, the building was used as a Greyhound Bus Station. The rear or east elevation of the building underwent minor alterations in 1947 or 1948 when an overhanging canopy was added for the convenience of passengers boarding the buses.¹³

The major changes to this building occurred during the historic period. These alterations help to explain the growth and changing needs of the community and contribute to the significance of the structure. The later changes did not significantly alter the building's character and do not detract from its historic qualities.

Narrative Statement of Significance

The Howard Hotel, originally built in c.1903 and remodeled in 1914 is historically significant as it describes a period of fundamental growth in Brigham City. The original two-story hotel was Brigham City's primary lodging building and the only large brick hotel in town between 1904-1914. After the third story was added in 1914, the size of the hotel increased to remain competitive with the other newly built hotels in Brigham City. After 1914, the Howard Hotel continued to be one of two major hotels in Brigham City. The growth of the city, combined with the dynamics of competition and development of the early twentieth century, is described in the structure and its location in downtown Brigham City.

Brigham City has a population of approximately 17,000 and is located 55 miles north of Salt Lake City at the northern end of the most densely settled region in the state, the 120-mile long Wasatch Front. It is the largest city in Box Elder County and serves as the county seat. The town was established as an agricultural village by Mormon pioneers in the early 1850s. Brigham City is typical of small-to-mid-size towns in Utah. With the exception of a few dozen mining and railroad towns, virtually all of the cities throughout Utah were established by members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon or LDS church). The settlement of these towns was part of the church's attempt to colonize the entire Utah Territory.

Though the Mormon pattern of establishing agrarian communities was the dominant influence on the settlement of Utah, non-Mormon activities also had a significant effect. The arrival of the transcontinental railroad in 1869 and the rapid growth of the mining and livestock industries brought thousands of non-Mormons to the territory. These were major industries that generated unprecedented prosperity and greatly influenced Utah's economy.

The growth in private enterprise in Brigham City is reflected in the number of business establishments listed in the Utah state gazetteers from the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. In 1900 over 175 businesses were listed in the gazetteer, and by 1928 there were over 350.¹⁴ Many new businesses were established in Brigham City during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Many were small retail and service shops typical of most small towns of the period--clothiers, mercantile stores, restaurants, hotels, theaters, drug stores, etc. Fruit growing was undertaken on a large scale beginning in the 1890s. Livestock and poultry raising were also important industries that boosted the local economy during this period.¹⁵ Concurrent with the emergence of private commercial and industrial enterprises was the development of many civic improvements: telephones were installed in 1889, a water system in 1892, an electric power plant in 1890-91, and a fire department in 1892.¹⁶ These improvements helped foster the growth of Brigham City as the principal city and county seat of Box Elder County. Business development continued in Brigham City until the Depression of the 1930s. Most of the existing commercial buildings in the central business district were constructed during the 1880s to 1930s. The Howard Hotel is associated with the Multiple Property Listing - Historic Resources of Brigham City, and specifically with the context of Private Industrial and Commercial Development 1880s-1930s of Brigham City.¹⁷

A few boarding houses, such as the Boden House on Forest and Second West streets¹⁸ and the City Hotel at Forest and First East,¹⁹ were pre-1900 hotels and are now demolished. Newspaper articles indicating the need for a large hotel existed several years before one was built, as seen in an 1892 issue of the Brigham City Bugler which stated, "Brigham City, like Logan, is sadly in need of a great, big hotel."²⁰ This need was met with the construction of the first large brick building functioning solely as a hotel. The Howard Hotel was originally called the Utah-Na Hotel, later the Boothe, and then the Wasatch Hotel before it was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Howard in 1931²¹ and named the Howard Hotel.

The hotel building provided food and lodging for travelers passing through Brigham City. It was also a center of activity for townspeople patronizing the hotel restaurant²² and the Post Office which occupied a room on the hotel's first floor in 1904.²³ In 1923, hotel owner J.E. Ryan remodeled the building and added a banquet or public meeting hall to accommodate local clubs and organizations.²⁴ This hall was enlarged in 1934 to allow for private dancing parties and other entertainments and conventions as well as banquets.²⁵ The Rotary Club and other local organizations held regular dinner meetings in this hall for many years.²⁶

The Howard Hotel was one of the first of Brigham City's three large hotel-use buildings. It appears that the Howard Hotel was first called the Hotel Utah-Na and was located first in the remodeled Widerborg Block²⁷, 70 South Main, a commercial block whose second floor was converted in 1903 from offices to hotel guest rooms. The Hotel Utah-Na was located in the Widerborg block for a short period of time and preceded being housed in the existing building by just one year and appears to have been moved to this building, the newly constructed Pioneer Block by January 2, 1904.²⁸

Hotel Brigham, 13 & 17 West Forest Street, is directly across the street from the Howard Hotel. Unlike the Howard Hotel which was engaged solely in hotel-related enterprises, the Hotel Brigham was also a major commercial block which housed such businesses as banks, beauty and barber shops, a jewelry store, billiards parlor, drug stores,²⁹ and a local weekly newspaper.³⁰ Professional offices in the building housed abstractors, attorneys, and accountants.³¹

In 1914 when the Hotel Brigham was constructed, the Howard Hotel underwent extensive remodeling to stay competitive and a third story was added increasing the number of guest rooms to 50, the same number as in Hotel Brigham.³²

The building continued in its original function as a hotel until the 1960s when the interstate freeway was completed, bypassing Brigham City. In 1969 the hotel was closed and the first-floor lobby and restaurant areas were used to house various local businesses.³³ The upstairs guest rooms were available for lodging until the mid 1980s when overnight occupancy of rooms was stopped and rooms were rented on a monthly basis. Local businesses continue to occupy the space.

The Howard Hotel's location in the center of downtown Brigham City is in the core of the community's historic section. The hotel is surrounded by the Box Elder County Courthouse, the Co-op Mercantile Store, the old City Hall/Fire Station, the Carnegie Library, and Hotel Brigham, all of which are listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The Howard Hotel has, since its construction, and continues to be a major feature in downtown Brigham City.
