Description The Old Stone House, which was constructed ca. 1784, is a two-story, gable-roofed, stone building, with a double-pile floor plan and end chimneys of stone. Front porch foundation and stone piers remain, although porch roof and supports have been removed. The facade has a central door with massive stone lintel flanked by single four-over-four windows with stone lintels. The second story has three four-over-four, shuttered windows. The rear elevation has an off-center entrance flanked by two single windows. The second story has two four-over-four windows and a third that has been filled with stone. The interior is being renovated. The roof is covered with metal.

Significance Samuel Gladney (ca. 1740-1800) received a royal land grant in 1768 on which he constructed the Old Stone House.¹ A corner of the house bears the date 1784. The Old Stone House passed through several owners before it was purchased in 1870 by the Lebanon Presbyterian Church for use as a parsonage.² It is significant as a rare example of eighteenth-century stone construction. **
