DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Statesview is located southwest of Knoxville just off the Kingston Pike or Highways 70 and 11 in an area which is rural but which is approaching development.

The original house, which was built in 1806, burned in 1823. At that time, the present structure was constructed on the same site. Statesview as it appears today is a simple two-story red brick dwelling in the Federal style. Both the main section and the wing are practically devoid of any architectural embellishments. On the east side are two interior chimneys, one attached to the main house, the other to the end of the wing; on the west side is an exterior chimney. Openings appear to be in their original location and the windows have twelve-over-twelve sashes. The front entrance has been altered. It was extremely difficult to photograph the building because of the many shrubs and trees surrounding the house and property. To the rear is a recent addition.

On the sizable piece of property is a swimming pool and a two-story log cabin built for use as dressing rooms. The yard has many large and handsome trees. Statesview faces west and is separated from the main highway by an extensive lawn, but is very near the access road which runs to the west of the property.

It was impossible to see the interior but a recent written description states that the wainscoting consists of sunken panels and deep rail. The house is one room deep and symmetrical in plan before the wing was added. A central entry hall with paneled staircase separates the two rooms.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Statesview is one of the earliest brick residences remaining in Knox County. It was the home of a prominent Tennessean, Charles McClung, who had hired architect Thomas Hope to build his first dwelling house, probably sometime between 1804 and 1806.

Charles McClung came to Knoxville from Pennsylvania in the late eighteenth century. In 1792, he became clerk of the first Knox County Court and served as County Court Clerk until 1824. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1796, a presidential elector in 1796 and 1800, and one of the first trustees of Blount College. McClung's greatest contribution to the area was surveying and laying out the city of Knoxville for his father-in-law, James White, in 1791.

In 1823, the original Statesview burned. Both the extent of the fire and the extent to which McClung rebuilt the original structure are unknown.
