Benton House Gulfport, Harrison County, MS

NARRATIVE DESCRIPTION

The Thomas and Melinda Benton House is located in Gulfport, MS, in the Turkey Creek Community, which is one of the oldest communities in the Gulfport area. The house is a post-Civil War vernacular Gulf Coast cottage, basically rectangular in shape with a rear wing. It is of wood-frame construction, with a pyramidal roof, and it rests upon cinder-block piers. The house is located at the front, northwest corner of a four acre parcel. The property also includes a contributing privy and a more recent, non-contributing garage.

A porch, recessed under the roofline of the house, extends along the full width of the front façade. The roof over the porch is supported by four square wooden posts, ornamented by angular spindlework brackets and resting upon brick piers. The floor of the porch is very old concrete which remains in excellent condition.

The front façade of the house, sheltered by the porch, contains a centrally-placed single-leaf door (without sidelights or transom), enframed by a broad, flat surround. On either side of the door is a set of paired three-over-one windows with broad, flat surrounds. The façade is clad in horizontal lapped wood siding, but the siding on the other exterior walls has been replaced.

The house is covered by a seamed metal roof, beneath which are surviving early wood shingles. The pyramidal roof rises to a central brick chimney at the peak.

The plan of the house contains two main front rooms flanking a central chimney. Each of these front rooms retains an original wooden mantel. Behind these two front rooms are smaller rooms arrayed along a central passage that now serves as a den, though this appears to have originally been an open breezeway. The interior of the house has a moderately high degree of integrity, retaining many of the original wall and ceiling surfaces, particularly in the middle room (a bedroom), which has varnished plank walls and floors. The house retains several original heavy plank doors with early box locks and doorknobs.

The Benton House is the earliest and most intact of the older houses of the Turkey Creek community. Despite some alterations through the years, it retains sufficient integrity throughout to convey its historic character and its identity as one of the oldest African American houses in the Gulfport area.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Benton House is locally significant to the Gulfport area because it is one of the oldest and most intact early buildings within the Turkey Creek Community, a historic African American settlement that predated the founding of the City of Gulfport, and because it was the home of two of the founders and earliest settlers of the community, Thomas and Melinda Benton. The period of significance extends from circa 1870, about the time the house was originally built, to 1938, the year of the death of Melinda Benton.

Thomas Benton (1835-1892) and Melinda Benton (1837-1938), freed slaves from "up North", came to Harrison County in search of a place to set up a home for their family. Though records do not indicate where the funds came from, Mrs. Benton was fortunate enough to be able to purchase many acres of land, which comprise approximately 50% of the Turkey Creek Community. The Bentons were quite generous in sharing and selling land to interested parties. For instance, the old Gulfport Creosote Plant, currently occupied by Cavenham Forest Industries, purchased their land from them for $1 per acre, legend has it. There was, however, one stipulation: the entire community would have access to well water, free of charge, for the lifetime of the community. The current residents did not know what a "water bill" was until the City of Gulfport brought water and sewer into the community in 1986. The area was not annexed by Gulfport until 1994. The City only recently celebrated its 100 year anniversary, so Turkey Creek was well established prior to the incorporation of Gulfport.

Verbal history indicated that Melinda Benton broke one of her legs at an older age, which resulted in poor health, eventually causing her death. She was 101 years old when she died in 1938. Thomas Benton, who died much earlier in 1892, was said to have gotten some type of respiratory disease (pneumonia, the whooping cough or something called "croup"). He apparently got caught in a storm in a boat and was there all night. He died at the age of 57.

Melinda Benton's daughter, Julia Benton Simms, resided at the home also. The home was later occupied by Julia's daughter, Lettie Simms, who remained in the house probably until her death about 1970. The home remained vacant for about 15 years until 1985 when Merlon Hines purchased it and he and his father began renovation efforts. The home was placed in a livable condition and reoccupied by the end of 1986.
