Describe present and historic physical appearance.

The Oneida County Courthouse is a detached, rectangular, two-story public building on a raised basement story. The front elevation of the building has five bays with a centered entrance. The entry bay is outset, and each flanking bay is setback successively from the plane of the entry. The entry has two sets of identical doors with a small vestibule between. The original entry doors are intact. They are double doors with large single panes etched with an Art Deco style border. Above the doors is a fixed transom light etched with the words "Oneida County." The building's structural framework of steel and concrete is veneered with pressed brick laid in common bond, with the exception of soldier rows above the windows and below the cornice and header rows laid as window sills. Bricks are laid to create a mottled effect, ranging in color from yellow to burnt orange. The concrete foundation is outset slightly to form a watercourse. The roof is flat. Cream-colored terra cotta cast with foliate, bundled sheaf, and zigzag designs decorates the fluted pillars either side of the entrance, the entry surround, string courses at the cornice, and planters either side of the front steps. The entrance, surrounded with geometric and foliate terra cotta pillars successively set back, places the building in the Art Deco style popular locally and used for several southeast and south central Idaho public buildings.

The interior of the building retains a number of period features, including its plan with a central hall leading to a lateral rear hallway; red, black, and green terrazzo floors; plaster walls with large-scale ceiling molding, stair rail capped with yellow tiles; tiled water fountain insets; original hallway light fixtures; and second-story skylights.

Within the past three to five years the perimeter walls of the building have been furred out on the interior, insulated, and replastered to match the original plaster. At the same time, double-paned windows with false muntins designed to approximate the original industrial steel sash windows were installed. While the loss of original windows has some effect on the building's integrity, the remaining original fabric conveys the important characteristics of the Art Deco style, and the building conveys a sense of the period in which it was built as a part of the WPA in Idaho.

State significance of property, and justify criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above.

The Oneida County Courthouse is significant under criterion "A" in the context of the development of county government as supported by WPA and PWA monies throughout the Depression years. The building is significant under criterion "C" in the context of the architecture of Idaho's county courthouses and as a local example of institutional architecture. The building retains its original monumental massing and most of its Art Deco style features, including its brick veneer, terra cotta detailing, and five-bay front. The remaining original fabric conveys the important characteristics of Art Deco style, and the building conveys a sense of the period in which it was built as a WPA project.

Because the building is part of a finite and endangered group of resources associated with the WPA in Idaho and because it is associated with a relief program that had exceptional impact on the Idaho landscape and economy during the Depression years, the building is presented for nomination before it reaches the 50 year mark.

Oneida County received substantial support for construction of its new courthouse in 1938, when the WPA regional office in Portland, Oregon, allotted a $28,350 grant toward construction of a courthouse estimated to cost $63,000. To fund the county's part of construction costs, the county held two bond elections. The first, held August 9, 1938, failed to obtain the necessary two-thirds majority. The second, held at the request of the Malad chamber of commerce and other local organizations, passed 394 to 76. Architects Sundberg and Sundberg of Idaho Falls were chosen to design the courthouse, and a Rigby contracting firm, Olsen and Sons, obtained the bid for construction. The courthouse was completed in September, 1939. The courthouse replaced an Italianate courthouse constructed in 1882.

The Oneida courthouse is one of three nearly-identical courthouses designed by Sundberg and Sundberg for 1938 WPA projects. The other two, Jefferson and Jerome county courthouses, have similar two-story massing, interior plans, and five-bay fronts with elaborate terra cotta entries. Like most of Idaho's county courthouses, the Oneida courthouse is the most ambitious and stylistically elaborate architectural design in its locality and its region and deserves National Register listing on that basis as well as for its contribution to our understanding of the range of architectural designs used for courthouses in Idaho.
