Architecture,

73. This house is one of six highly significant Federal style brick houses in the county based on the hall and parlor plan type. Later additions and alterations have not obscured the classic two-storied, three-bayed form common in such houses. The significance of the house is increased by the survival of a nearby stone springhouse, by the prominent location at the intersection of several main highways, and by the connections of the son-in-law of the original owner with Barren River commerce.
