A black and white photograph of the Mann Theatre entrance. The marquee sign is the central focus, displaying the text "NOW OPEN MANN THEATRE'S NEW GLENDALE EXCHANGE 8 128 N. MARYLAND AVE". The entrance is framed by two large, classical-style columns. Above the marquee, a decorative architectural element features a central globe. The interior of the theatre is visible through the entrance, showing a large, dark, rectangular structure in the center and people sitting on a bench to the left. The scene is dappled with sunlight and shadows from trees outside.

A black and white photograph taken from a low angle looking up through a covered walkway towards the entrance of the Mann Theatre. The walkway is supported by several decorative columns with tiered capitals. The ceiling of the walkway is visible, showing some texture and shadows. In the distance, the entrance is framed by a decorative archway. Above the entrance, a marquee displays text. The scene is flanked by trees on both sides, and the lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights and deep shadows.
