DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The present appearance, except for patina of age and the overabundance of vines and planting, shows little change from its original neo-classical character. On the exterior, the rusticated limestone walls, fluted stone columns, tile roof, elaborate wood cornices, and exterior copper flashing and metal work have all weathered well. With few exceptions, it is structurally sound and rests firmly on heavy poured concrete foundation walls. The interior is in "mint" condition.

The rather limited corner site is bounded on the north and east by two major streets. The building is roughly 98 ft. wide by 116 ft. long and 44 ft. high. It faces north. Wide flaring stone steps lead to a projecting two-story Corinthian columned stone porch, flanked by one-story wings, framing the main entrance. The wood balustrade which formerly crowned this axial feature has been removed. It is the most noticeable change from the building's original appearance and should be rebuilt. A porte-cochere with crescent access drive to the adjacent street serves a secondary entrance on the east elevation. A small but heavy rear porch centers on the south elevation, while a twostory solarium projects from the west elevation. The aggressive upward thrust and large scale of the residence is muted and contained by the massive hip roofs of red Spanish tile with their projecting dormers, many showing arched cornices over semi-circular windows. Rectangular window openings are capped by deep stone lintels with keystones; windows are mostly double hung of clear plate glass, except that entrances and feature windows are leaded-and-stained glass.

The interior is rich in mahogany, oak, bird's eye maple, and other hardwoods; all woodwork is finely crafted and in excellent shape; parqueted floors; walls with original tapestries and stenciled fabrics; baths with vintage porcelain fixtures and delicately patterned and tinted ceramic walls and floors; most of the original light fixtures, some Tiffany, are intact. A large central stair hall with adjoining elevator shaft (never used); a dual-operation pipe organ; large fireplaces with carved mantels; a third floor ballroom. The whole interior layout, while a bit formidable in scale, functions well and provides good circulation and access to all areas.

In summary, the Beiger residence is: well-designed, both architectually and structurally; its materials are the best; its craftmanship is of high order; and despite a cold, ostentatious formality, it works; and it has served well the purpose for which it was built. Today, its mellowing age surrounds the home with a nostalgic aura of times past to give it a warmth transcending any bare stick-and-stones appraisal.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The true significance of this threatened Beiger Home is its prototypal symbolism. It typifies and is an excellent example of turn-of-the-century affluence on conspicious display in the small city manner of the American midlands.

Mr. M.V.Beiger was a founder and first president of a frontier company making an all-knit wool boot product, which developed into one of the nation's largest rubber footware operations, Ball Band. Two Studebaker brothers of pioneer wagon and later auto fame served on its 5-member Board of Directors. Eventually, the company was to become a key part of the U.S.Rubber Company which is now the great UniRoyal industrial complex.

With rapidly increasing personal wealth coupled with wifely pressures to openly display it, the time-honored predilection towards cultural and material acquisition resulted in extensive world travels by the Beigers to collect objects of art and furnishings for a planned palatial establishment. Construction of the home began in 1903; was completed in 1909. Ironically, Mr. Beiger died in 1903; his wife became sole owner and resident until her death in 1927, when the home became a trust-operated residence for the elderly, and so continued until 1967 when operations ceased for financial reasons.

The hulking size of the home with its many large and small classic Corinthian columns, the heavy rusticated stone walls, and the colorful red tile roof combine to form an overpowering structure which dominates the local scene to this day. As the largest and most widely known residence in the area, this building is a true landmark and the literal cornerstone of a community which has all too few examples of similar caliber. With its location in the nation's heartland, its impressive architecture, and its importance as a story-book but fast vanishing incarnation of the average merican sidea of what an old-time tycoon's private "pad" should look like, it deserves a place in the National Register. As British Professor of Environics Patrick J. Horsbrugh of nearby University of Notre Dame has stated: "This house (Beiger Home) is exceptional · · · by any standards. To allow it to be destroyed would be to pay an historic sacrifice and price."
