The Hancock-Clarke House consists of two parts, which were erected at different times. The small one-and-a-half-story gambrel-roofed frame ell, containing a common living room or kitchen and a tiny parson's study downstairs and two low-ceiling chambers above, was built in 1698 by the Reverend John Hancock, grandfather of the renowned Signer of the Declaration of Independence. The main or front part is a two-and-a-half story frame structure, with a large central chimney and two rooms on each of the two floors. This section was added in 1734 at the expense of Thomas Hancock, second son of the clergyman and a very successful Boston merchant.

The Reverend John Hancock lived in the house for 55 years and his successor, the Reverend Jonas Clarke, for 50 years. The Lexington Historical Society bought the house and moved it across the street from the original site in the fall of 1896. In 1902 a brick addition was made at the rear of the house with a fireproof vault to protect the more valuable possessions of the Society. The house has been carefully restored to its 18th century appearance and is well maintained. The structure serves as headquarters for the Society and is also open to visitors.

The Society has recently purchased the original site of the Hancock-Clarke House on which can be seen the early foundations.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Hancock-Clarke House was for seven years (1744-1750) the boyhood home of John Hancock and is the only extant structure which can be associated with this Signer of the Declaration of Independence for Massachusetts. John Hancock and Samuel Adams were guests in this house on the eventful night of April 18, 1775; awakened by Paul Revere, the two patriots were hustled away from Lexinton to avoid capture by the approaching British force. In 1896 the house was moved across the street from its original site in order to save the structure from demolition.

History

The house was built by John Hancock's grandfather, the Reverend John Hancock, and on the death of the boy's father at Quincy in 1744, the seven-year old lad came to live here with his grandparents. The future signer was adopted by his childless uncle, Thomas Hancock, the wealthiest merchant in Boston, and graduated from Harvard College in 1754.

When the Revolution broke out John Hancock still had strong ties with the Hancock-Clarke House, for his cousin Lucy Bowes, the wife of the Reverend Jonas Clarke, was living in the parsonage. Clarke was an outstanding preacher and patriot and his house became a meeting place and refuge for leaders of the revolutionary cause. night of April 18, 1775 John Hancock, his relative by marriage, and Samuel Adams were guests in his house, which is located about a quarter of a mile from the Lexington Green. At midnight or soon after Paul Revere arrived at the Hancock-Clarke House. Sergeant William Munroe of the Lexinton Minute Men was stationed on guard at the front door and refused to let Revere pass, stating that the family had retired and did not wish to be disturbed by any noise . around the house. Whereupon Revere cried out, "Noise! You'll have noise enough pefore long. The Regulars are coming out!" About 12:30 a.m. on April 9 William Dawes, Jr. also arrived from Boston with the same warning. About 2:30 a.m. Hancock and Adams were taken by chaise to Burlington to avoid capture by the approaching British. Later that morning the two patriots were joined at Burlington by Hancock's betrothed, Doroth Quincy, and his aunt, Mrs. Thomas Hancock, who had also been guests of the Reverend Jonas Clarke.

Threatened by demolition in 1896, the Lexington Historical Society acquired the Hancock-Clarke House and moved it across the street to
