

United States Department of the Interior Registration Form

This form is for use in nomination or requesting determinations for individual properties and districts. See instructions in How to Complete the National Register of Historic Places Registration Form (National Register Bulletin 16A). Complete each item by marking in the appropriate box or by entering the information requested. If an item does not apply to the property being documented, enter "N/A" for "not applicable." For functions, architectural classification, materials, and areas of significance, enter only categories and subcategories from the instructions. Place additional entries and narrative items on continuation sheets (NPS Form 10-900a). Use a typewriter, word processor, or computer, to complete all items.

Cocke County Memorial Building, Cocke County, Tennessee

NARRATIVE DESCRIPTION

Cocke County is a mountainous county in East Tennessee located less than twenty miles north of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. The Cocke County Memorial Building is located at the intersection of Cosby Highway (U.S. 321) and U.S. 25/70 in the county seat of Newport. Located six blocks east of the Cocke County Courthouse, the Memorial Building was constructed in 1931 for American Legion Post 41 and designed by the architectural firm of Manley and Young. The courthouse, also designed by Manley and Young, was constructed at the same time and is similar in style to the Memorial Building. The courthouse was listed in the National Register in 1995.

The two story rectangular plan building is built of brick in the Colonial Revival style and has square pilasters on the main (east) elevation. The foundation is of concrete and the gabled roof has asphalt shingles. The windows are metal multi-light casements set into wood frames. Some of the original wood doors throughout the building have been replaced with circa 1970 aluminum and glass doors. Others have had metal sheeting applied to the exterior for security reasons. The gable roof is steeply pitched except above the lobby area of the main elevation where the pitch is lower.

The primary, or east, elevation is divided into seven bays. Wood pilasters divide the center section into five bays, with a large arched window with a wood sash at either side forming the outer two bays. There are entrances in each of the three middle bays. Each has a wood frame with a round arch fan light above. The center fan light has been replaced with a plywood insert decorated with applied block letters reading "American Legion Post 41." The original window is in storage. The doors themselves were replaced circa 1970 with glass and aluminum double doors; the two flanking doors have been covered with plywood sheeting. Just below the entablature in each bay are bands of double hung wood frame windows. "Cocke County Memorial Building" appears in applied wood lettering in the frieze above the pilasters. There are concrete quoins on the corners of the main elevation. There is a U.S. Geodetic Survey Benchmark on the southeast corner of the building, near ground level.

The south elevation has seventeen bays with original twenty-light casement windows with moveable center sections. The windows are set into wood frames. The exterior door at the east end has a round arch which originally held a fan light. The door surround is neo-classical in style, with a denticulated cornice above the paneled door. The door at the west end has been covered on the exterior with metal sheeting to protect against vandalism. There is a metal canopy above the door.

The rear, or west, elevation is gabled and has ten bays. There is an entrance slightly off-center with a solid undecorated wood door. The windows are original twenty light metal casements with moveable center sections and are set into wood frames. There are four windows in the gable field of the second story. The gables at this end are discontinuous.

The north elevation is similar to the south elevation, with sixteen bays of twenty-light metal casement windows. There is a raised basement with a concrete foundation on this elevation. Concrete steps with a plain metal bar metal sheeting applied to the exterior. There is a round arch fanlight above the door. Another door, three bays east, is identical but is not accessible by stairs. There is a third door, also inaccessible, which has been covered with metal facing and has never had a fanlight. Also on this elevation is a flush wall chimney.

There have been few changes to the interior of the building. The floors are of narrow-gauge tongue-and-groove hardwood. The ceilings and walls retain the original plaster finishes. The stucco was applied to a metal mesh which is visible in damaged sections of interior walls and ceilings. It was applied directly to the brick on the unfinished interior side of the load-bearing outer walls. The roof was replaced ten to twelve years ago and evidence of water damage exists in some areas of the ceilings and floors. This damage predates the roof replacement. Doors throughout the building are paneled wood and darkly stained.

The lobby is located at the east end of the building. The walls are covered with stucco and have vertical board wainscoting approximately five feet high capped by molding. There is a large staircase on either side of the lobby. The steps are wood as are the posts and rails. There is a concessions stand of temporary construction at the base of one stairway which will be removed when the building is renovated. The original stairs leading from the lobby into the gymnasium have been covered with a removable, carpeted, wood ramp.

The gymnasium is located in the center of the building and is the size of a standard basketball court. There is a raised stage area opposite the ramped entrance. The court is surrounded on three sides by permanent bleachers of beaded tongue-and-groove wood. A wood railing with square balusters surrounds the entire bleacher area. A dropped ceiling and new lights were added above the gymnasium circa 1970. The bleachers are accessible via the staircases adjacent to the lobby and from interior staircases at the rear of the building.

There are interior wood staircases at the southwest and northwest corners of the gymnasium. Between the stairwell and the stage on each side are ante-rooms (used as stage wings) connected to the stage by doorways. The rooms are connected by a hallway which forms the back wall of the stage. A paneled wood door in the center of the wall gives access to the hallway. The hallway is lit by four windows on the western wall.

There are offices located in the second floor, above the lobby on the east end of the building. These offices have not been renovated and retain original doors, windows, walls, ceilings, and configuration. The doors are of wood and have five horizontal panels. These rooms contain the only multi-light double-hung wood sash windows in the building. More offices are located in the first floor, below the bleachers. The public library once occupied one room which has built-in shelves. A curved hallway below the bleachers on the south side leads to a banquet hall at the rear of the building and below the stage, and a kitchen in the northwest corner. Below the gymnasium there are locker rooms and showers.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Cocke County Memorial Building in Newport is eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criteria A and C. As an important meeting place and recreational facility, the building is significant in the social history of Cocke County and has become a landmark in the city of Newport. Significant in the area of architecture, it is constructed in the Colonial Revival style which is commonly seen in public buildings of the Depression era and retains the majority of its original materials and architectural details. The permanent bleachers with beaded wood risers, hardwood floors, metal and wood windows, and stucco walls are all original significant features which give the building its feeling and preserve its sense of time, making it architecturally significant. The building has statewide significance as one of two Memorial Buildings constructed in the early 1930s with financial support from the Tennessee Legislature.

The American Legion was chartered in Tennessee in May, 1919, to provide comradeship and boost morale for returned veterans of the first World War. American Legion records show that membership increased statewide throughout the 1920s. This increase in membership would justify the construction of meeting halls. In 1929, the state approved funds for the construction of two memorial buildings in the state - one to be built in Newport, in East Tennessee, and another in Dickson, west of Nashville.

The special appropriations for these memorial buildings, as well as other special projects throughout the state were threatened by a deficit in state revenues in the late 1920s. In the end, both memorial buildings were funded, and at larger levels than originally anticipated. The memorial building in Dickson, like its counterpart in Newport, is Colonial Revival in style. Designed by Marr and Holman, the building was completed in 1932 and continues to serve the city by providing office space for local government.

In Newport, a number of veterans met in late 1919 to organize an American Legion post, electing Dr. L. S. Nease as its first commander. From 1919 to 1927, membership never exceeded one hundred and activities were confined to various interests of ex-servicemen, primarily securing hospitalization and compensation for members. In February 1927, the "special committee offered a resolution urging the post to take immediate steps to secure funds and to erect a memorial building in honor of the living and dead veterans of the World War and other wars, this building to be used as a public building for the people of Cocke County and local post of the American Legion and the Auxiliary."¹

Four reasons were cited for constructing a memorial building in Newport:

1. No fitting or lasting memorial has been erected or proposed to honor soldiers.

2. Such memorials have been and are erected by other sections of the nation.
3. A larger percentage of manhood of this county enlisted in the military and naval forces of the nation than any other section of the South or probably of the whole nation, which increases the responsibility of the county, state and nation to those who gave the best years of their lives.
4. Great need for such a community building in the heart and life of the city.²

The construction of the building was funded jointly by the State, Cocke County, and the American Legion. In April 1927, the county court appropriated ten thousand dollars to match an equal amount to be raised by the American Legion. In 1929, Mr. Robert Parrott sponsored House Bill No. 688 to provide twenty thousand dollars to match the money raised by the American Legion and by the county. The act also established a nine-member commission to supervise the construction of the building. With funding in place, a lot was purchased in February 1930 from the estate of James A. Denton for the sum of $8,025.00.

Although early plans were prepared by Knoxville architect C. A. Tarwater, the firm of Manley and Young was ultimately chosen to design the building. Fred J. Manley and C. B. Young formed their partnership in Knoxville in 1916. Fred Manley was an engineer and a graduate of the American Temperance University of Harriman and the University of Tennessee. C. B. Young graduated from the University of Pennsylvania School of Architecture. Both men served in the armed forces during World War I; Manley in 1916 and Young in 1918. Following the war, the firm became one of the most prolific architectural firms in the region. Its public buildings include grade schools, high schools and banks throughout East Tennessee and Kentucky. Many of Knoxville's commercial buildings, including the Medical Arts Building (NR 05/24/84), Maplehurst Apartments, and the original Ft. Sanders Hospital, were designed by Manley and Young. The firm may be best known, however, for its tobacco warehouses, located throughout Kentucky and Tennessee. The firm operated out of offices in Knoxville and in Louisville, Kentucky.³

Construction of the Cocke County Memorial Building was begun late in 1930 and Legionnaire B. L. Click was appointed as building Superintendent. Most of the early records of Post 41 have disappeared but newspaper accounts in the Newport Plain Talk chronicle the construction of the building. Funding fell through when those who had pledged to donate defaulted on their pledges, but by February 1931, new fund raising efforts were put in place to raise enough funds to complete the construction. Members of the American Legion were given options to purchase shares at $100 per share to raise the needed money.⁴ By March, enough funds were raised and completion was anticipated for spring.⁵

The Memorial Building was Newport's social center for many years, with peak use following World War II. USO dances and events were held there, as were basketball games, wrestling matches, and other athletic events. Located in a "dry" county, where the sale of alcohol was prohibited, the American Legion provided a private club where veterans could gather and socialize within the constraints of the law. The building served as a bivouac for traveling troops and was equipped with a kitchen and bath facilities. Community gatherings, including bean suppers and dances were held frequently at the Memorial Building. The Ladies Auxiliary sponsored many of these events in addition to lectures.

Peak interest in the American Legion across the state is indicated by a jump in the membership rolls following the end of World War II. While membership waned in the late 1940s and early 1950s, it swelled again at the end of the Korean War. Since the 1950s, interest in American Legion membership has decreased, perhaps influenced by the unpopular war in Viet Nam. Consequently, use of the Memorial Building also declined. The building was used by the city recreation department until a few years ago, when a new facility was constructed. Athletic practices and elections are presently held at the building. Members of the American Legion continue to meet and the Newport Theatre Guild has plans to use the building as performance space.

The only significant changes to the building have been the installation of the dropped ceiling and lights in the gymnasium; the replacement of the original primary entrance doors with aluminum and glass doors; and the application of metal facings on door exteriors. With the support of the American Legion, the Newport Theatre Guild intends to restore all entrances to original appearances.

VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION

The property is the same property containing the land and the building as described in Deed Book W, Volume 53, Page 32, located in the Cocke County Courthouse, dated 20 February 1930 and recorded 31 May 1930, as follows:

"Situated in the Sixth Civil District of Cocke County, Tennessee, and in the Town of Newport, and bounded on the North by 'B' Street (commonly known as Church Street Extension), on the East by Prospect Avenue, on the South by the north right-of-way line of State Highway No. 9 as now laid out and graded, and on the West by 'C' Street."

VERBAL BOUNDARY JUSTIFICATION

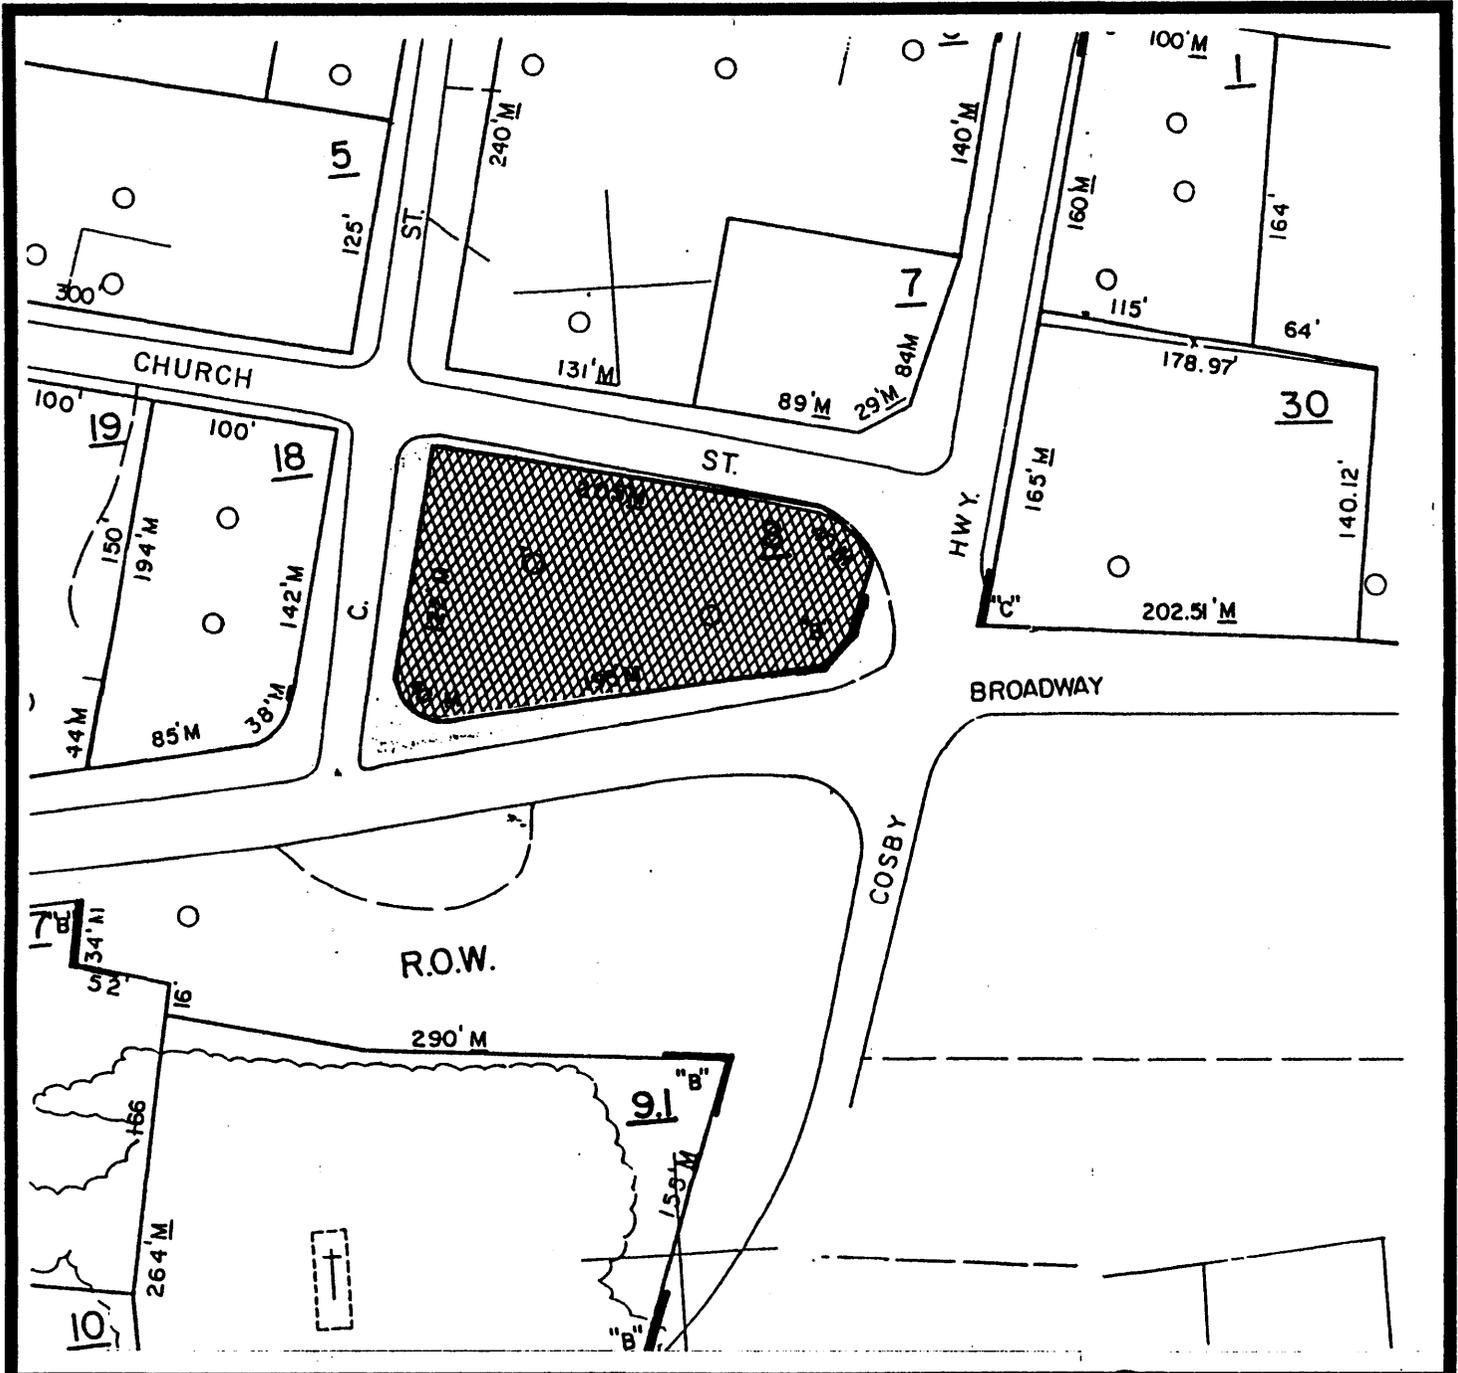

The boundary of the nomination follows the historical boundaries of the property which have remained unchanged since the building was constructed in 1931. The property occupies one city block in the city of Newport and is bounded by a street on all four sides and includes a lawn at east end, in front of the building.
