ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION

Situated along Highway 14, the H. J. Dougherty House is located in the southeastern Stone County community of Marcella. Built c. 1905, the Dougherty House is a one story dogtrot or two pens with open hall plan. The frame weatherboard house, facing east, sits on stone piers and is covered by an overhanging gable roof.

A full length porch distinguishes the principal (east) elevation of the house. The porch roof, an extension of the gable roof, is supported by six chamfered posts. Under the porch, the house facade consists of two pens flanking the weatherboard-enclosed hall. Two four-over-four double-hung windows within plain surrounds identify the pens and flank a central door, placed in the enclosure.

The gable ends of the house represent the structure's north and south elevations. A cut stone exterior chimney defines the north gable end. A four paneled wood door is positioned adjacent to the chimney firebox's west side. In the south elevation, a four-over-four double-hung window with plain surrounds is centered in the gable end mass.

The west (rear) elevation is distinguished by a weatherboard enclosed porch. A central door flanked by symmetrically placed single windows defines the west wall of the enclosed space. The north wall of the enclosed porch encompasses a four-over-four double-hung window. A four-light window is placed in its south end.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The c. 1905 J. H. Dougherty House, built on a dogtrot or two pen with open hall, reflects the change in the dogtrot's facade during the twentieth century. The modification to the facade was the enclosing of the open hall. The most recognizable characteristic of this method is the center door placed in the enclosure. The central door becomes the principal entrance into the house. If neatly done, as with the Dougherty House, the house's enclosure with the central door can be mistaken for a central hall plan instead of the dogtrot.
