The original Walnut Hill Presbyterian Church was a meeting house built of logs in 1785. In 1801, the log house was replaced by a stone church, 40 x 50 feet, which stands today.

This historic stone church originally had two rows of square windows, the upper tier giving light to the galleries on three sides. During the late summer of 1880, the church was remodeled. Eight Gothic shaped windows, replaced the square ones and the galleries were removed. The stone front steps were a gift of H. Howard Gratz in 1900.

Today, Walnut Hill appears much as it did after the renovation of 1880. Inside, the narthex, about ten feet deep across the front, has stairs leading to a second floor overhead. The nave of the church is a single space, high-ceilinged to the roof.

This rural church stands on a hill surrounded by more than nine acres of land. One of the graves in the adjacent cemetery is that of Reverend James Crawford, the first pastor, who died in 1803.

The iron garete at the stone entrance to the church yard on Walnut Hill Pike were donated by James Allen Todd in 1925 in memory of his great grandfather, General Levi Todd, a benefactor of Walnut Hill Church in the early days.

In 1785, Rev. James Crawford was one of two ministers ordained at the first meeting of a presbytery in Kentucky. In the same year he organized Walnut Hill Church. Rev. Crawford was one of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention in Danville, Kentucky in 1792. In 1791 he opened a school at Walnut Hill for Latin, Greek, and Sciences.

The church was active from 1785-1953, a period of 168 years. Plans exist for restoring the historic church building. As a church and school Walnut Hill was one of the leaders in the moral, educational and cultural advancement of Kentucky in the days of early statehood.
