Summary Paragraph

Georgetown Methodist Church is located in Georgetown, Mississippi which is a small, quiet community 15 miles east of Hazlehurst, the county seat of Copiah County. The church is a one-story vernacular church built in 1934. The church, located at the corner of Lane Avenue and Broad Street, is set in a quiet part of town with woods to the south (Photo 1).

Narrative Description

The Georgetown Methodist Church is located near the southern edge of Georgetown, Mississippi, in a residential neighborhood. The church is slightly set back from Lane Avenue on a well-kept lawn, at its intersection with Broad Street. Other than some small bushes flanking the porch, there is no formal landscape plan.

Exterior

The simple T-shaped wood clapboard church faces west and has a front-facing gable roof with a projecting gabled porch entry. A hip-roofed classroom wing on the east end of the sanctuary runs perpendicular to the sanctuary, creating a T-shape floor plan which is original. The west façade (primary) has central, double-leaf, 6-panel doors, surmounted by a rectangular 2 x 6 transom. To either side of the doors is a pair of 4/4 wood double-hung windows. The entry is sheltered by a simple distyle gabled porch supported by two round columns. There is no evidence to suggest whether the round columns are original or replacements. The porch gable and main gable have knee-braces. The eaves have decorative exposed rafter tails. The gable entry and roof both have vents for attic ventilation. The stoop is concrete with brick steps. A concrete sidewalk connects the road in front of the church to the front entry and then splits to the north and south, continuing around both sides of the building and leading to the classroom entries at the rear of the building (Photo2).

An original hipped-roof classroom wing on the east side of the building runs perpendicular to the main building and has an original door, matching that of the main entry, on each side, allowing for ingress and egress (Photo 3). Both doors are original 6-panel wood doors with 4-light transoms. The wing contains a classroom and bathrooms. Five wood 6/6 double-hung windows with original decorative glass panes are located on the north and south façades of the sanctuary (Photo 4). Protective plexi-glass has been installed over the windows on the south facade closest to the street (Photo 5). The east façade has five wood 6/6 double hung windows also with original decorative glass panes. The roof is finished with composite shingles and the foundation is made of brick piers. The perimeter of the foundation of the classroom wing has been infilled with brick in a "latticed" fashion (Photo 6). There has been no known alteration to the exterior of the building other than this and the roof.

Interior

The front entry leads directly into a large sanctuary (Photo 7). The walls are horizontal wood bead board painted white. The bottom portion has a stained wood wainscoting of vertical bead board. The materials are original. The floors are original heart pine wood, covered by commercial low profile carpet. The ceilings are white painted bead board. On the north and south walls are protruding chimney flues covered with bead board. These flues were once used for the stove heaters (Photo 8). Four sets of original "school house" lights illuminate the sanctuary. The front of the sanctuary has an updated railing to create a pulpit area (Photo 9).

At the rear of the sanctuary, to each side of the pulpit, are two wood, two-paneled, doors with simple wood trim. These doors lead to a large classroom (Photo 10). Evidence suggests that a wall once separated the room into four small classrooms. One men's and one women's bathroom is located at the rear corners of the classroom. The materials in the classroom are the same as the sanctuary, white bead board and commercial low profile carpet over wood floors. Between the bathrooms and classroom is evidence of another set of flues. These form diagonals where the bathroom wall meets the rear of the classroom. They are covered with bead board.

The bathroom walls are covered in sheets of light paneled wood. This was added at a later date and is not original to the building. The building does not have central air. Electric heaters provide heat.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Georgetown Methodist Church is eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C for association with Architecture. The building is a good example of vernacular church form. Built in 1934 and dedicated in 1936, it is the only vernacular, wood, gable-front church in Georgetown.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The congregation of Georgetown Methodist Church first met in a “house” as early as the 1850s.<sup>1</sup> On April 22, 1882, and again one year later on April 23, 1883, tornadoes hit Georgetown and destroyed the church. Many lives were lost in the 1883 incident.<sup>2</sup> It is not known whether the two previous buildings were located on the same piece of property as the present church. According to some of the older members of the church, the previous sanctuary burned around 1929.<sup>3</sup> Older members heard that a local carpenter named Moore Dickerson built the church, but there is no documentary evidence to about the building’s construction.<sup>4</sup>

The Georgetown Methodist Church was originally part of the Brookhaven District. The present church was built under the leadership of L.T. Nelson during his 4th year as pastor. Nelson served as pastor 1932 – 1934. The church was not completed, however, until after the session of the conference in 1934. The first service in the building was the first service conducted by G. E. Allan, pastor 1935 – 1936. A dedication ceremony took place November 6, 1936. Dr. Charles W. Crisler, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, preached a sermon and dedicated the church shortly thereafter. An adjourned session of the 4th quarter conference was held in the afternoon. A special invitation was extended to all former pastors to be present.<sup>5</sup>

Georgetown was once a thriving town along a main railroad line, but the population dwindled when the Gulf, Mobile & Ohio merged with the Illinois Central railroad in the 1970’s. The small community has a small Methodist following and therefore has had to reduce services to once per month. The church is maintained primarily by the family of Carolyn Beasley, a church member since the 1970s. Ms. Beasley and her family, the Board of Trustees, and the members of the church have maintained the building to the present and are interested in ensuring that the building is appreciated for its historical significance.

Church buildings symbolize a commitment by their congregations to the community and a certain level of permanence within the development of the town. In evaluating churches, it must be determined whether the building is architecturally significant as a well-crafted example of a recognized architectural movement, and, if so, whether it retains sufficient integrity of design and workmanship to accurately convey that significance. Four factors can be used in making distinctions. They are age, rarity of the building's architectural form, craftsmanship, and physical integrity.

Historic religious buildings in Copiah County include simple frame, vernacular, gable-front buildings as well as buildings constructed in the Queen Anne, Gothic Revival, Neoclassical Revival, and Craftsman styles. The Georgetown United Methodist Church is a vernacular, frame, gable-front church building with a high degree of integrity.

The interior and exterior maintain a high degree of integrity. The original wood siding and wood doors are extant along with 15 original wood 6/6 double-hung windows and four 4/4 wood double-hung windows. All 6/6 windows contain original decorative glass panes. The two double-entry front doors match the two rear exterior doors. The exterior foot print has not been altered and the brick piers are original.

The interior has original bead board walls and wainscoting along with original lights, pews, and heart pine flooring throughout. Chimneys flues were left in place in the main sanctuary and the rear classrooms. No heating or air conditioning has been installed.

The only other extant church in Georgetown is the First Baptist Church. The church building, built in c.1925 in the Neo-classical style is radically different from the simpler Methodist church.

The Pleasant Valley Methodist Church (NR, 1996) and the Tabernacle Methodist Church (NR, 1996), both near Hazlehurst, MS, are similar to the Georgetown Methodist Church. Although both the Pleasant Valley and Tabernacle churches are much older, the continuity of design and materials illustrate the continuing reliance on this vernacular building style for rural and small town churches in Mississippi.

The Registration Requirements for Religious Resources are discussed on pages 67-69 of the MPS cover document entitled "Historic and Architectural Resources of Copiah County, Mississippi." The Georgetown Methodist Church was evaluated using the Mississippi Department of Archives and History's guidelines for assessing vernacular churches and was found to be eligible because it is a rare surviving example of a wood frame, gable-front church and it displays a high degree of architectural integrity. The building also retains integrity of feeling and association.
