Price Villa is a large, impressive three-story red brick building of Renaissance influence situated on a hillside in the southern part of Atchison. Now flanked on three sides by larger buildings of Mount Saint Scholastica, it once stood in stately isolation overlooking the city.

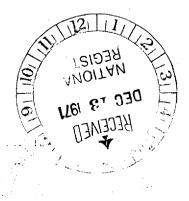

Cut stone quoining at the corners enhances the building's attractiveness. A simple cornice separates the brick wall at the second floor from the mansard roof enclosing the third floor. Window openings on the first and second floors have arched heads. The third floor dormer windows were originally arched to match the other windows. There are first floor bay windows on both the north and south sides of the building.

A square four-story tower topped by a cross is built over the front entrance. The hip-roofed tower originally had terminated with an ornate railing and had circular dormer windows on each side of the hip roof. A flat-roofed porch runs the width of the front facade.

There is a side entrance on the south just west of the bay window. A corresponding entrance on the north side has been removed.

When it was completed as a residence in 1874, reportedly at a cost of $60,000, Price Villa had five porches and verandas, 38 rooms, 15 halls, 10 stairways, hot and cold water, gas pipes, two bathrooms and all the conveniences of the day. The interior woodwork made extensive use of mahogany, walnut, and rosewood. The house and its outbuildings, which included a large brick barn, a smokehouse, and a poultry house, and the surrounding acreage of lawns, pasture, and orchards constituted one of the most elegant 19th century estates in Kansas.

After the Benedictine Sisters acquired the property in 1877, they had the Villa remodeled and altered as their funds permitted to adapt it to their religious and educational purposes. Some of the interior changes were: six of the large fireplaces have been bricked shut; some of the original parquetry floors have been replaced; all but one of the ceilings with ornamental plaster work have been changed; the floor plan of the structure has been somewhat modified. At the present time Price Villa is used by the music department of Mount Saint Scholastica College. The former outbuildings have long since disappeared and their sites occupied by other educational structures. Even though changes have been made to the building, the exterior of Price Villa still reflects the elegance of its original appearance.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Price Villa was built for John M. Price in the southwest part of Atchison in 1872. It was described, while in the process of construction, in the September 24, 1872, edition of the Atchison Daily Champion as "the finest residence in the State." The architect was Thomas Wise and F. W. McLaughlin had the contract for the brickwork. In September, 1872, the Daily Champion reported the estimated cost as $40,000; in January, 1873, the figure given was $60,000. Dollar values placed on the property in the mid-1870's ranged from $75,000 to $100,000. Some accounts indicate that the building was completed in 1872; others report that the interior was not totally finished until 1874

John M. Price was a prominent Atchison lawyer, political figure, and promoter. The Price family did not reside in the house for a lengthy period, but while they did, their dinners and entertainments were the talk of the town.

Price's financial position was badly shaken by the Panic of 1873. In an apparent attempt to recoup their fortunes, he and other prominent Atchison businessmen formulated a grand lottery scheme known as the Kansas Land and Immigrant Association. Some of its stated purposes were to promote immigration to Kansas and to benefit the town of Atchison. Two hundred thousand shares were to be sold at $5.00 apiece, and each shareholder would be entitled to one chance in a drawing for 2,664 pieces of valuable property ostensibly owned by the Association. The top prize would be Price Villa, valued at $75,000. An extensive advertising campaign was waged throughout the United States through direct mail circulars and newspapers. The Kansas constitution had an anti-lottery provision, but no apparent effort was made to enforce it. In fact, Governor Osborn and other state officials endorsed the scheme.

The five men running the Association--George W. Glick, president (later the first Democrat elected governor of Kansas); Luther C. Challis, vice president; Samuel L. Strickler, secretary; George Storch, treasurer; and John M. Price, general manager--were indicted in federal court in Topeka on April 10, 1876, for using the mails to distribute illegal lottery material and for falsely claiming Association where he of the properties to be awarded as prizes. Federal court records indicate that the case was continued to the next term but do not show its disposition. Later, in October, 1876, Challis and Strickler were indicted again. They pled guilty in April, 1877, and were fixed $100 each and costs.

8. The drawing had been postponed a number of times but was finally held on August 25, 1876. Atchison newspapers described the proceedings and listed the numbers of the winners. Price Villa was won by No. 190,736. A list of the names of all the winners was promised, but it never appeared and there is no subsequent mention of the lottery in the Atchison newspapers. There is no known evidence that any of the prizes were awarded or that anyone but the promoters benefited from the lottery.

John Price lost Price Villa through a sheriff's sale on November 1, 1876. In June, James N. Burnes had won a judgment against him for $13,572.95. Price was given until September by the court to pay or have his property sold by the sheriff. On November 1, Burnes bought the house and grounds for $17,000.00, apparently to protect himself.

In June, 1877, the Sisters of the Order of St. Benedict, who operated a convent and school in Atchison under the leadership of Rev. Mother Evangelista Kremeter, became interested in acquiring Price Villa. The purchase was made on July 16 for $20,000 (which was paid over a period of years), and by July 25 the Sisters had moved into Price Villa, which was later renamed St. Cecilia's Hall. Until 1884 it was the only building for the convent and the school; now it is used as a music hall and is surrounded by larger educational buildings of Mount Saint Scholastica.

Price Villa is one of the best examples of residential Renaissance architecture in Kansas. It also has historical significance because of its connection with the widely heralded real estate distribution of the Kansas Land and Immigrant Association in 1875-1876.
