DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The John A. Bagley residence is a three story clapboard and shingle house in the Queen Anne style. It is characterized by its octagonal corner tower, pedimented porch and hipped roof with abbreviated gables.

The porch with its balustrade, turned columns, and denticulated cornice faces south. The east side of the house is enhanced by a circular leaded glass window and a second story oriel below the gable. On the west side a two story, bowed bay window with leaded glass transoms is below the gable. A bracketed porch is at the rear.

The interior woodwork has been restored to its original condition, although the interior spaces are somewhat altered. A third floor room is embellished with a set of wall murals painted by Joseph Phelps who later became a well-known illustrator when he was nine or ten.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The John A. Bagley residence is significant in being the finest Queen Anne residence in Montpelier. Its three story octagonal tower, fine leaded glass windows and restored interior woodwork make this home a distinctive one in the area.

The murals by Joseph Phelps augment the building's significance. Phelps was one of the first Idaho artists to achieve national recognition especially for his Sun Maid Raisin Girl.

John A. Bagley was a highly esteemed lawyer in South East Idaho and in 1902 was elected Idaho attorney general, the first Mormon to achieve this honor. Bagley erected the residence shortly after his election to the post.
