Summary Paragraph

The Lameuse Street Historic District (LSHD) is within the Central area of Biloxi, as described in the Biloxi MRA. Lameuse Street is the spine of this long, narrow, irregularly shaped district, which extends northward from the CSX Railroad to Elder Street, a block short of the Back Bay. The district is crossed by two streets, Division Street, one of Biloxi's east-west traffic arteries, and Bradford Street, a residential byway north of Division Street. Residential buildings characterize the district, with the exception of a commercial corridor along Division Street and a church complex at the intersection of Lameuse and Bradford streets.

Narrative Description

Introduction:

The proposed historic district is significant within the context of the Historic Resources of Biloxi MRA (updated), under Criterion C for Architecture. The district includes 120 resources, 104 of which are contributing and 16 of which are non-contributing. The period of significance is 1880-1965.

Description:

The Lameuse Street Historic District (LSHD) is within the Central area of Biloxi, as described in the Biloxi MRA. Lameuse Street is the spine of this long, narrow, irregularly shaped district, which extends northward from the CSX Railroad to Elder Street, a block short of the Back Bay. The district is crossed by two streets, Division Street, one of Biloxi's east-west traffic arteries, and Bradford Street, a residential byway north of Division Street.

The southern boundary does not abut the railroad, instead following the northern lot lines of railroad-adjacent non-historic commercial properties. From the southern boundary to Division Street, the district borders include the properties on both sides of Lameuse Street, generally following the rear property lines. Between Division and Bradford streets, the district expands one block westward to incorporate the properties on both sides of Haise Street; to shift westward, the boundary includes properties on the south side of Division Street before turning northward at Delauney Street and generally following the rear lot lines of Haise Street's western properties. Between Bradford and Elder streets, the district shifts to the east, excluding the west side of Lameuse Street, while continuing to include the buildings on the east side, to a point short of Elder Street, and then encompassing both sides of the next street to the east, Main Street, up to Elder Street.

The streets in the district generally follow the cardinal directions creating a modified grid pattern. The north-south blocks are generally longer than the east-west blocks. Lameuse Street, which forms the spine of the district, runs north and south with two traffic lanes. The street has narrow sidewalks and on-street parking. The other north-south streets are Haise Street, and Main Street. Both streets are two-lanes with sidewalks and on-street parking. Division Street is a major east-west arterial street. It is mostly two-lane, but there are dedicated left turn lanes with electric signals for traffic turning north and south on Lameuse Street. The street has sidewalks without on-street parking. However, there are several marked parking spots in front of the Lighthouse Apostolic Church at 769 Division Street (Inv. 5, 1940) [Photo 7]. The other east-west streets are Bradford Street and Elder Street. Both are two-lanes with sidewalks and on-street parking.

Residential buildings characterize the district, with the exception of a commercial corridor along Division Street and a church complex at the intersection of Lameuse and Bradford streets. Few vacant lots punctuate the landscape despite the occurrence of numerous severe weather events since development of the neighborhood began. Most of the residences are one-story with frame construction. Most houses sit close to the street, with small front yards. Lot sizes vary, with smaller, denser lots on Haise Street, while the lots on Lameuse Street have slightly more generous back yards.. The lots throughout the district tend to be narrow with little space between houses. Most of the houses do not have garages or carports. Residents park on the street or on paved or gravel parking pads in the yards. Most properties lack formal landscaping, but there tend to be small lawns and mature specimens of typical Gulf Coast flora are well-distributed throughout the district. These include live oaks, palmettos, and azaleas.

A small commercial core is located on Division Street. Businesses include a service station and convenience store, a barbershop and a clothing store.

There are two churches in the district. The Lighthouse Apostolic Church is located at 769 Division Street (Inv. 5, 1940) [Photo 7] in the Art Deco building which previously housed the United Novelty Company. Blessed Francis Xavier Seelos Catholic Church at 360 Lameuse Street (Inv. 99, 1959) [Photo 17] occupies the lot historically associated with an earlier Catholic church.

The Gorenflo Elementary School, located on Lameuse Street, played an important role in development of the neighborhood. However, the historic 1924 school building was demolished in 2003-2004. The new school, constructed in 2004, is located west of the boundary of the district.

The district encompasses 120 resources, 104 of which are contributing, and 16 of which are non-contributing. Building forms in the district include bungalows, center halls, 20th century commercial, L-fronts, Shotgun houses, Creole Cottages, and Biloxi Cottages. Gable Front Bungalows are the most common form. Contributing buildings tend to use architectural detailing modestly. Many of the architectural styles popular between 1880 and 1965 are present: Folk Victorian, Queen Anne, Tudor, Craftsman, Art Deco, Minimal Traditional, Ranch, Neo-Eclectic, and Modern.

Resources are considered contributing if they were built during the Period of Significance, relate to the architectural significance of the district, and retain sufficient elements of integrity to illustrate a form or style that locally popular during the Period of Significance. Resources are considered noncontributing if built outside the Period of Significance, or due to alterations, disturbances, additions, or other changes they it no longer possesses historic integrity.

The overall integrity of the district is high. There are some vacant lots and all fourteen noncontributing resources were built after the Period of Significance. The most common changes to historic buildings are introduction of non-historic siding and window and door replacements.

There are no previously listed resources in the Lameuse Street Historic District.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Lameuse Street Historic District is significant under Criterion C for Architecture. The district exhibits building forms and styles of local, regional, and national importance. It also reflects residential development in Biloxi between 1880 and 1965, including periods of prosperity and population growth, when the demand for housing was high.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The Lameuse Street Historic District is located in Central Biloxi. The Historic Resources of Biloxi-Amended multiple property listing defines Central Biloxi:

Central is located north of Downtown East Central and is bounded by the Back Bay of Biloxi (north), Lee Street (east), the CSX railroad tracks (south), and I-110 and Keegan Bayou (west). Development in this area started on the Back Bay in the mid-19th century with construction of manufacturing facilities and worker's housing. In the lower part of the area streets were laid out and lots platted in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Today the area retains many houses, as well as churches and commercial buildings, from the 20th century.<sup>1</sup>

The development of the Lameuse Street Historic District is consistent with this history. Available Sanborn maps reveal that the majority of the district was first included on the 1909 map. They also reveal that the district has mainly been residential from its initial development. While a few small businesses were once scattered within the district along Lameuse Street, the former Bellande Beverage Company at 319 Lameuse Street (Inv. 78, 1920-1930) is the only one of these buildings that is extant.<sup>2</sup> By 1925, the district was well-established and has not changed substantially. The maps reveal that the Division Street commercial corridor was originally a mixture of dwellings and vacant lots until commercial development began between 1948 and 1952.

Residential development of the district also is reflected in the establishment of the church complex at the corner of Lameuse and Bradford streets. This complex is now known as Blessed Francis Xavier Seelos Parish, and encompasses a church, rectory, and community hall (360 Lameuse Street, Inv. 98, 1959) [Photo 17]. Sanborn maps reflect that a Catholic Church, rectory, and convent occupied that site by 1948, when it was known as St. John's Catholic Church. In 1925, the lot is depicted intact, occupied only by a single residence, while St. John's Catholic Church was located one block to the northeast at the intersection of Main and E. Bay View streets.

Architecture

The resources in the Lameuse Street Historic District illustrate the building forms and styles popular in Biloxi from 1880 to the mid-1960s.

The house at 345 Lameuse Street (Inv. 96 1880-1890) [Photo 16], illustrates an early vernacular form popular in Biloxi's residential architecture, the Creole Cottage. The Creole Cottage, introduced in the mid-nineteenth century, is typified by its gable roof, undercut gallery and four-bay façade with doors in the two central bays. The form may have been influenced by Creole building practices in Louisiana since Biloxi and South Louisiana formed a culturally distinct zone separate from the Deep South.<sup>3</sup>

The local vernacular building form known as the Biloxi Cottage is represented by four buildings: 758 Division Street (Inv. 3, 1910), 246 Lameuse Street (Inv. 53, 1915-1925), 276 Lameuse Street (Inv. 67, 1923-24) and 306 Lameuse Street (Inv. 71, 1920). The Biloxi Cottage is generally characterized by a hip or gable-on-hip roof, which, on the facade, extends outward from the building to create an undercut gallery. The Biloxi Cottage features a four-bay facade, most often pierced with two central doorways. The form is found in other areas of the Gulf Coast, but is labeled the Biloxi Cottage because of the concentrated numbers found in the city. The plan of the hip-roofed form is generally four rooms, with four fireplaces opening from a central flue. The central chimney plan is not commonly found in the Deep South although there are precedents for the basic four-room plan. The Lombard House (1826) in New Orleans presents all the features of the Biloxi Cottage that developed seventy years later.<sup>4</sup>

The regional vernacular form known as the Shotgun house is defined by "its narrowness. Most often three rooms deep, it is only one room wide."<sup>5</sup> It is well represented in the Lameuse Street Historic District. One prominent example is 364 Lameuse Street (Inv. 100, 1890-1895) [Photo 18], which features Folk Victorian details, the turned posts with jigsaw brackets. The neighboring house at 366 Lameuse (Inv. 101, 1890-1895) is similar. Another shotgun variant found at 325 Lameuse Street (Inv. 81, 1890) also has Folk Victorian details but also includes a lateral wing. The origin of the Shotgun house is complex with some historians positing a connection to Haitian and African building traditions. Other historians suggest the form is associated with trappers' and fishermen's shacks. Perhaps the best conclusion is that the shotgun house is probably a synthesis of these and other influences, and can be seen as a syncretism. That is, the points of commonality between different house types known to different peoples, were retained when different types were brought together, thus forming something new.<sup>6</sup>

The earliest shotgun houses in Biloxi date to the late 19th century and crossed socio-economic lines. Later in the 20th century, the shotgun became associated with lower class housing, especially for African Americans, “influenced by the cheaply built shotguns of the non-coastal Deep South.”<sup>7</sup>

In her discussion of national forms popular between 1850 and 1930, Virginia McAlester identifies a form she describes as “Gable-Front-Wing Family” which developed from the Greek Revival gable front form when “an additional side-gabled wing was added at right angles to the gable-front plan to give a compound, gable-front-and-wing shape.”<sup>8</sup> A house form popular in Mississippi that from the exterior resembles the “Gable-Front-Wing” in fact developed separately and is apparently not in the same family. Vicksburg has some of the highest-style Italianate examples of this form, but it is common in a one-story vernacular adaptation in all railroad towns of the post-Civil War era. Richard Cawthon, retired Chief Architectural Historian for the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, adopted the term “L-front” to describe the form, since this phrase did not imply that the lateral wing was an addition and better explained the overall shape of the building. Surveys of Mississippi L-fronts have shown that the gable front “wing” is in fact an original feature; L-fronts almost uniformly have a traditional center-hall floor plan, with two rooms to either side, with the gable-front resulting in one larger front room that typically served as the parlor. The house at 270 Lamuese Street (Inv. 65, 1896-1904) is a notable, if unusual example. The house is square in plan, with the gabled projecting bay to the north and another gabled projection to the south that forms part of the gallery running between the two projections under the main roof.<sup>9</sup>

Vernacular and popular building types are distinguished from “polite” architecture in the history of Biloxi’s architecture. According to The Buildings of Biloxi,

Polite architecture is the province of the architect and professional designer, who consciously begin a building with both function and aesthetics in mind, but also with an eye on national trends of style and technique.<sup>10</sup>

In the Lameuse Street Historic District, “polite” architecture reflects local interpretations of nationally popular styles, including the Queen Anne style, popular among Biloxi residents during the period dating from 1880 to 1910 and promoted through the newspaper, plans, specifications and articles on architecture appearing frequently: a ‘Queen Anne Cottage’ was described and illustrated in 1893: ‘An ideal home for people of limited means, price to be about two thousand dollars.’<sup>11</sup>

The style is characterized by steeply pitched, irregularly-shaped roofs; variously sized single and grouped windows; a variety of decorative elements and siding types; and asymmetrical façades with partial or full-width porches. The houses at 375 Main Street (Inv. 110, 1904-1910) and 379 Main Street (Inv. 111, 1900) [Photo 21] are local examples. The Queen Anne detailing is most prominently revealed in the jigsawed porch-post brackets and spindled friezes.

The nationally popular architect-developed bungalow form is represented in the district. The house at 225 Lameuse Street (Inv. 39, 1930) [Photo 2] is described as “an intriguing bungalow with a simple two-bay façade. It is like a shotgun house in full bungalow regalia.”<sup>12</sup> In Biloxi, the form is characterized by a gable roof, usually perpendicular to the main façade, shallow roof pitch, gabled porches with wide overhangs and visible rafter ends, and “[B]y 1920, this type with its Craftsman styling was a dominant form of new construction in Biloxi, not to be superseded for another twenty-five years.”<sup>13</sup>

Many of the houses in the Lameuse Street Historic District reflect the widespread influence of the Craftsman style. The Craftsman style also began in California and spread throughout the United States through popular magazines. Drawing on the English Arts & Crafts movement, the Craftsman style became the most popular style for small houses in the period from 1905 to the 1930s<sup>14</sup> and continued to be popular in Biloxi until 1945. The Craftsman influence on houses in the Lameuse Street Historic District is noted in The Buildings of Biloxi: An Architectural Survey, which identifies six examples in the 200 and 300 blocks of Lameuse Street. Although some of these houses have been slightly altered over time, the house at 262 Lameuse Street (Inv. 61, c. 1938-1948) retains a high-degree of integrity. Typical Craftsman details are seen, including its prominent front-gable roof...matched by a full-width front-gable porch with tapered wood post supports atop brick piers. The façade features a single-light cottage door entrance that is flanked two-over-one lights as well a paired three-over-one double-hung sash window.<sup>15</sup>

The sole known example of an Art Deco-style building in Biloxi is located in the Lamuese Street Historic District. The Lighthouse Apostolic Church at 769 Division Street (Inv. 5) [Photo 7] was built in 1940 for the United Novelty Company. The term "Art Deco" comes from the 1925 Paris Exposition Internationale Des Arts Decoratifs et Industriales, six month fair that drew 15 million visitors with 15,000 exhibitors: artists, fashion designers, jewelers, furniture makers, sculptors and ceramicists. Art Deco architectural design is characterized by linear or angular compositions with the exteriors composed of "concrete, smooth-faced stone and metal...simplified and streamlined, and a futuristic effect was often sought."<sup>16</sup> The United Novelty Company building exhibited Deco detailing seen in "the rounded corners of the projecting central section, the rounded aluminum canopy over the entrance and the glass block windows."<sup>17</sup> Although slightly modified for its current use as a church, the building continues to reflect its Art Deco heritage.

There are nine Ranch-style houses in the Lameuse Street Historic District. with four examples built during the Period of Significance. Notable examples include the house at 335 Haise Street (Inv. 24, 1948-1952) [Photo 11]. The hip-roof with broad overhanging boxed eaves is a clear identifying Ranch feature. The house at 259 Lameuse Street (Inv. 60, 1954) also features a hip roof with broad boxed eaves as well as the attached carport, which are often seen in Mississippi. Although the ranch house originated in southern California, it became widely dispersed across the country after it was approved under FHA financing guidelines. With the growth of many southern and southwest cities following World War II, the ranch became "nearly ubiquitous" in those areas.<sup>18</sup>

Although the resources in the district are generally modest, they represent a compact and intact group of buildings that illustrate the development of Biloxi's Central area during the period of significance. The buildings represent local, regional and national forms and local interpretations of nationally popular architectural styles at different times during the period of significance. They demonstrate the community's awareness of national trends and a desire to see the city's architecture reflect the best accepted design principles.

The Registration Requirements for resources in Biloxi are set out in the Historic Resources of Biloxi-Amended (MRA). Requirements for residential resources are set out on p. 65-66. Requirements for commercial resources are set out on p. 69. Requirements for civic resources are set out on p 73.

There are five currently-listed National Register historic districts in the city. The Downtown Biloxi Historic District (NR, 1998) is composed of the historic commercial core of the city. The District, as currently-listed contains only commercial resources. An amendment in 2015 included additional commercial resources, governmental resources and some residential resources.

The Reynoir Street Historic District (NR, 2015) is a compact collection of residential resources exhibiting building forms and styles of local and regional importance in the late 19th and early 20th century. While the Reynoir Street Historic District contains many of the same types of resources found in the Lameuse Street Historic District, it is much more compact and developed over a shorter period of time.

The West Beach Historic District (NR, 1984) consists almost exclusively of residential resources constructed in the late 18th and early 19th century and, illustrates Biloxi's prominence as a summer resort in the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries. Most of the homes in the area, which includes some of the city's finest Eastlake-influenced, Neoclassical Revival, and Bungalowoid residences, were developed by and for summer residents.<sup>19</sup>

Hurricane Katrina damaged many resources in the West Beach Historic District and the boundaries will be re-evaluated based on survey completed by FEMA and MDAH.

The West Central Historic District (NR, 1984) consists of primarily residential resources. The resources along the beach represent summer homes, the area away from the beach represents a middle- to upper-class neighborhood. Hurricane Katrina damaged many resources in the West Central Historic District and the boundaries will be re-evaluated based on survey completed by FEMA and MDAH.

The Biloxi Veterans Administration Medical Center Historic District (NR, 2002) is composed of the historic resources associated with a medical center operated by the Veterans Administration.
