

Coal Gasification Plant with surge tank, modern mixer building, and modern propane tank at left. Coal storage area was at right where upright tanks are visible.

Georgetown Coal Gasification Plant

1 of 5

Oct., 1984

Photographer: Dick Carter
Location of Neg.: Delaware
Bureau of Archaeology and
Historic Preservation

8/7/85

Interior view of gasification plant showing water heater which provided hot water for thawing of outside storage tanks. Oil storage tank is in ceiling of this room.

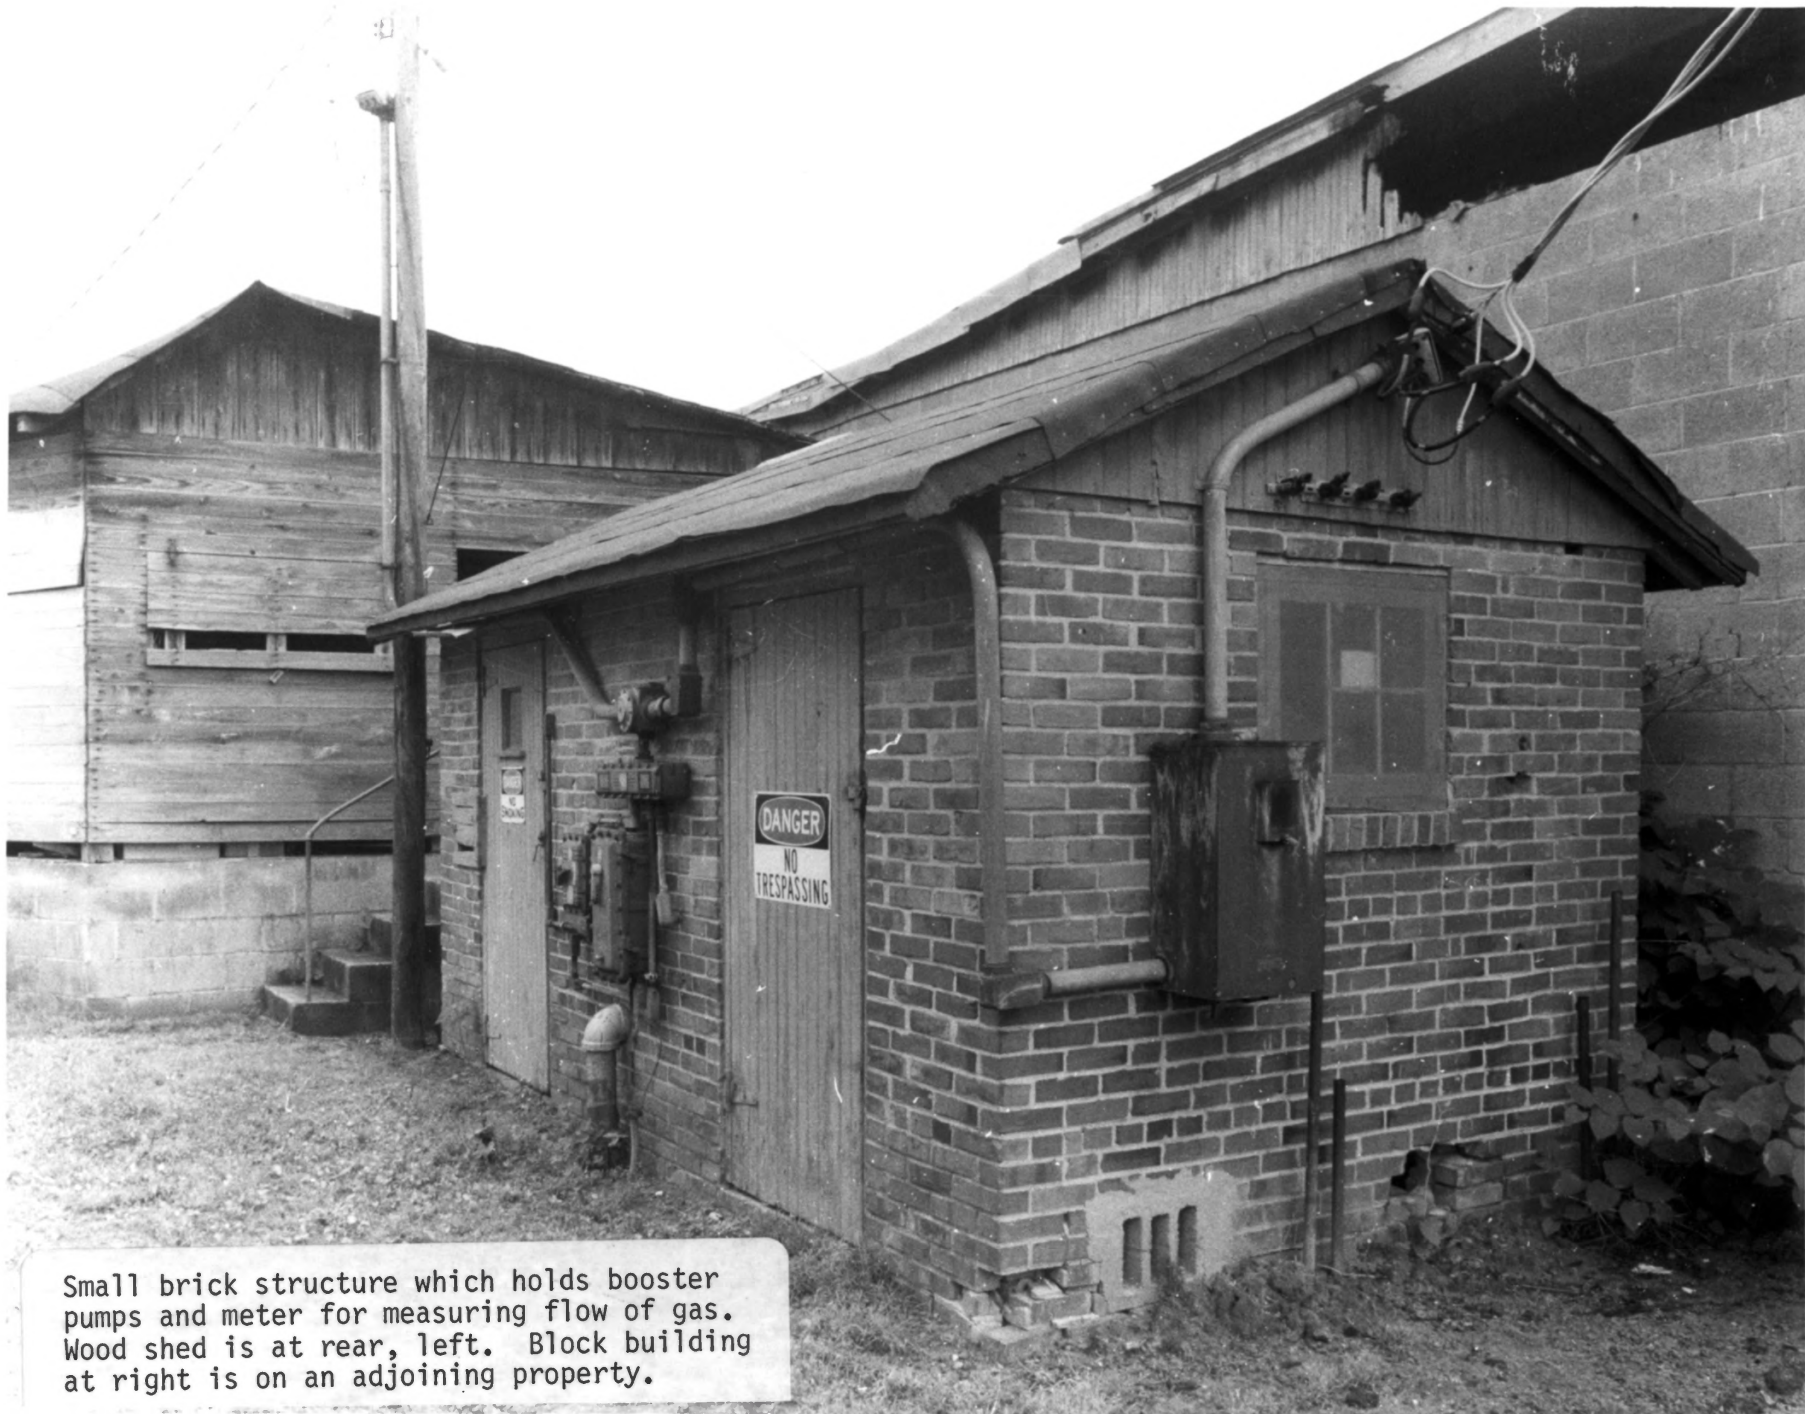

Georgetown Coal Gasification Plant

2 of 5

June, 1981

Photographer: Dick Carter
Location of Neg.: Delaware
Bureau of Archaeology and
Historic Preservation

8/7/81

Small brick structure which holds booster pumps and meter for measuring flow of gas. Wood shed is at rear, left. Block building at right is on an adjoining property.

Georgetown Coal Gasification Plant

3 of 5

June, 1981

Photographer: Dick Carter
Location of Neg.: Delaware
Bureau of Archaeology and
Historic Preservation

8/7/81

GEORGETOWN COAL GASIFICATION PLANT

View of coal gas storage tanks as they appeared in June, 1981, before they were demolished.

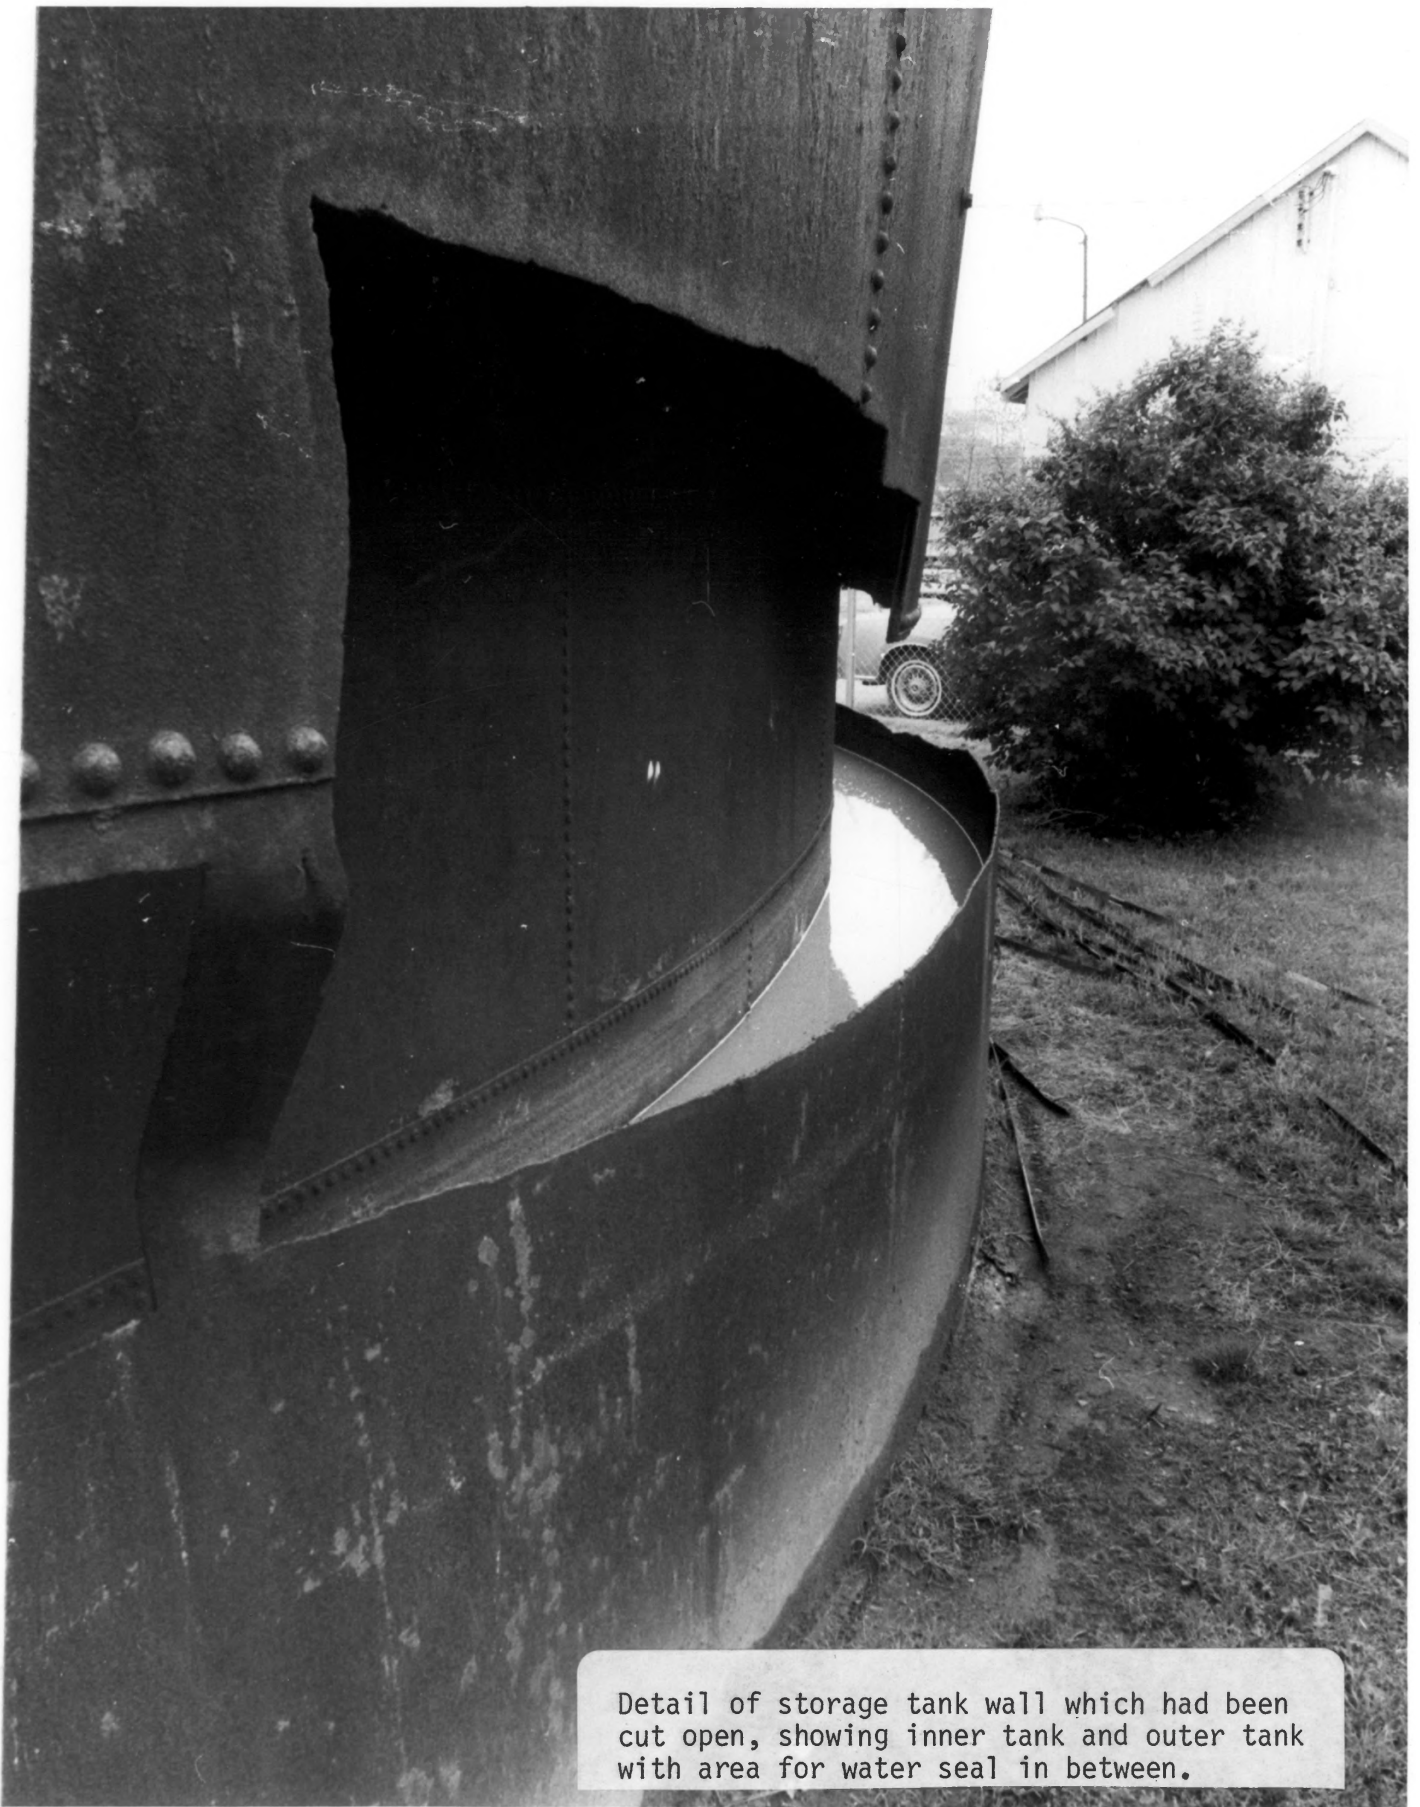

4 of 5

June, 1981

Photographer: Dick Carter
Location of Neg.: Delaware
Bureau of Archaeology and
Historic Preservation

8/7/85

Detail of storage tank wall which had been cut open, showing inner tank and outer tank with area for water seal in between.

Georgetown Coal Gasification Plant

Detail of coal gas storage tank, the side of which had been cut open preliminary to demolition, showing inner tank and outer tank with water seal area between two sections.

5 of 5

June, 1981

Photographer: Dick Carter
Location of Neg.: Delaware
Bureau of Archaeology and
Historic Preservation

191/10