7. DESCRIPTION continued

Northeast off the hall is the parlor with one raised panel wall, paneled window seats and wainscot, and glazed corner cabinet with an arch like that in the hall. The cabinet is decorated with a carved shell and fluted columns. A late mantel has been applied over the paneling, reducing the opening of the fireplace. Late Federal trim with corner blocks has been applied around the door and windows.

On the opposite side of the hall is a smaller room that has original window trim and a Federal mantel with an opening smaller than that of the original fireplace. Beyond the hall (southwest) is a cross-hall, or corridor, with exterior doors on both ends, and the present dining room. As in the two front rooms the size of the diningroom fireplace was reduced and trimmed with a Federal mantel, this one with gouge carving. Flanking the fireplace is an enclosed stair and a passage leading to the present kitchen which was enlarged from a closet with a small window. A large string of frame additions is built on the southeast side of the house.

On the second story, the rooms correspond with those below. The porch chamber has a very low ceiling and three windows with a superb view of the Patuxent River. Each room has very simple trim and two panel doors. Above the diningroom there has been some alteration to accomodate a modern bath.

Most of the construction details are exposed in the attic which extends above the whole house.

8. SIGNIFICANCE continued

After John Bigger's death, his considerable estate and cruciform house became the property of his widow, Anne Bigger, who subsequently married Patrick Andrew. Andrew continued living in Bigger's house after his wife died, even though John Bigger's will had stipulated that the property was to go to his nephew, Kendal Head. Head conveyed the title to James Carroll of Annapolis who brought suit against Andrew and won an ejectment.

In the 1730's, the house was rented to, and then bought by, Thomas Crompton. Architectural details in Cedar Hill indicate that the house was built during the Crompton period. Documentary evidence indicates that he did live in a cruciform house similar to Cedar Hill.⁴

Crompton died in 1743. His widow married James Weems, a wealthy Calvert County planter who held Bigger in trust for Thomas Crompton's son Thomas Crompton until 1767. The house and land remained in the Crompton family passing to Thomas Crompton's (d. 1773) daughter, Mary Crompton Gantt, and then to his grandson, Dr. Thomas Gantt (d. 1829). After Dr. Gantt's death, Cedar Hill became the property of his son, Virgil Gantt, who operated a farm there until 1871.

The next owner was Mason Locke Weems, the President of Weems Steamboat Line which operated passenger boats on the Chesapeake Bay between Baltimore and southern Maryland. The house had a succession of owners in the twentieth century. In the 1940's, Charles Smith Hamilton and his wife restored Cedar Hill. The current owners, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Schneider, are continuing a restoration program for the house.
