DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The State Gazette of South Carolina, September 27, 1787 described Edward Rutledge's House at 117 Broad Street, at the corner of Orange Street (then No:- 55 Broad Street), as "that well built elegant HOUSE," which had been constructed by a Mr. Miller. William Brotherhead's Book of the Signers (1861), has a sketch that shows the Edward Rutledge house to be a large wooden double house.

The Edward Rutledge house is a large two-story frame house over high basement with hipped roof. Almost square, the structure is five-bays wide and four-bays deep. A two-story porch supported by columns extends along the west side and around the south (or rear) elevation.

A central modillioned pediment with circular window rises from the main roof on the street (north) facade and covers the three center bays. This pediment is tied into the facade by means of consoles. Windows, adorned by exterior louvered shutters, are topped by cornices. The center doorway is now topped by a triangular pediment; the 1861 sketch show the same entranceway then surmounted by cornice. A two-story clapboard wing one-bay wide and one-bay deep and built on the main axis, was added to the east side of the house in the last quarter of the 19th-century. Except for the wing, the exterior of the house appears much as it did in the 1861 print.

A center hall extends about halfway through the house. To the right (or west) are two rooms each with its own fireplace. To the left of the house, in the northeast corner, is a stair hall containing a curved stairway. Behind this room is a large room, and the kitchen is located in a wing at the southeast (rear) corner. The interior woodwork appears to date from the 1880's and partition walls have been inserted to subdivide the large original rooms into smaller areas.

The structure is now used as a home for elderly women and is not generally open to visitors, although portions of the first floor may be visited upon request. There is a large garden area in the rear of the house.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

The residence in 1787 of Edward Rutledge, a signer of the Declaration of Independence for South Carolina, lawyer, politician, soldier, and governor of South Carolina. This is the only existing structure that can be associated with Edward Rutledge. Except for a wing, the exterior of the house is little-altered; the interior, however, has undergone considerable change.

Brief Sketch of the Life of Edward Rutledge, 1749-1800

Edward Rutledge was born November 23, 1749 either in Charlestown (now Charleston), or in Christ Church Parish, across the bay, South Carolina. The son of physician, he began the study of law at the Middle Temple in 1767 and was admitted to the English bar in 1772. He returned to South Carolina in 1773 and began the practice of law in Charleston. In 1774 he married Henrietta Middleton, the daughter of the wealthy planter Henry Middleton. Rutledge had three children by this marriage.

Rutledge's public career began in July 1774, when he was elected a delegate to the First Continental Congress; he served in this body in 1775 and 1776. He was also a member of the first and second provincial congresses of South Carolina in 1775 and 1776. In 1776, as the leader of the South Carolina delegation, he staved off action on the resolution for independence for nearly a month, but on July 2, under his influence, the South Carolina members voted for the Declaration. Rutledge favored a weak confederation of the colonies because he feared that the "low Cunning and those levelling Principles" of the New England States might prevail if a strong Federal government was established.

In November 1776 Rutledge left the Continental Congress and returned to Charleston to resume the practice of law. He also served as a captain of artillery in the South Carolina militia. In 1778 he was elected to the State House of Representative from Charleston and chosen by that body in 1779 to be a delegate to the Continental Congress. Rutledge, however, did not reach Philadelphia.

8. Significance (1)

He was in the battle at Beaufort, South Carolina, on February 3, 1779 and was captured by the British at the fall of Charleston on May 12, 1780. From 1780 to July 1781 he was a prisoner of war and held captive at St. Augustine, Florida. He was exchanged in the latter year and from 1782 to 1796 represented Charleston in the South Carolina House of Representatives as well as in the state conventions of 1788 and 1790. He was successful in his law practice and added greatly to his property. His first wife died in April 1792 and in October of that year he married Mary (Shubrick) Eveleigh.

Rutledge was stiffly conservative and rarely conceded anything to the democratic elements in South Carolina. A Federalist, he was a presidential elector in 1788, 1792, and 1796. In 1796 and 1798 he was elected a state senator. In 1798 he was also elected governor of South Carolina. His health, however, was broken and he performed his duties carefully but in great physical distress. He died in Charleston on January 23, 1800 and was buried in the churchyard of St. Philip's Episcopal Church of that city.
