Description of present and historic physical appearance:

The West Main Street Commercial Historic District is located in downtown Statesboro, Bulloch County, Georgia. Statesboro has a gridiron street pattern, laid out around a central courthouse square. The West Main Street Commercial Historic District is located along West Main, immediately east of Walnut Street and a block southwest of the county courthouse. The district is comprised of five storefront buildings, one single-story and four two-stories in height, containing sixteen storefronts. Constructed of brick between 1905 and 1923, the buildings within the district have uniform setbacks and are on lots of unequal size. Sidewalks, curbs and parking spaces separate the buildings from traffic along West Main. As with the other commercial districts, there are no major landscape features or green spaces within the nominated district.

The buildings are typical of those found in early 20th-century commercial districts. Modest details, including corbeled brick work, segmental-arched windows, pilasters, and pressed-metal cornices, are featured on utilitarian, storefront-type commercial buildings. Many of these buildings have received unsympathetic alterations in the 1970s and 1980s. These alterations have been confined to modernization of the storefronts; upper level details remain intact.

West Main Street's most outstanding structure was known historically as the Brannen Building. Located at the corner of West Main and Walnut, the Brannen Building is a series of five attached storefronts constructed in a row. Each storefront steps down with the downhill slope of West Main Street. The buildings share a common pressed-metal cornice and identical storefronts. Details include double-door entrances set flush with the sidewalk, pressed-metal pilasters, and display windows. Each building also has three two-over-two windows with segmental-arched openings on the second floor. These buildings, with their matching details intact, comprise the best preserved early 20th-century commercial group in downtown Statesboro.

Several of the buildings within the district have received unsympathetic alterations in recent years, but because the buildings have retained their original overall design, scale, setback, and decorative details, the integrity of the district has not been compromised. The boundaries of the historic district were determined by the concentration of buildings which have retained their integrity. Neighboring buildings were excluded because extensive alterations had compromised their integrity.

Section 8

Significance of property, justification of criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above:

Narrative statement of significance (areas of significance)

The West Main Street Historic District played an important part in the historical development of downtown Statesboro and is eligible for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places under criteria A and C as a part of the Downtown Statesboro multiple property listing. In support of the criteria, the district is significant in the area of architecture for its early 20th-century commercial buildings which are similar to those found in other Georgia cities but uniquely well-preserved in Statesboro. The district is also significant in the area of commerce for its association with, and reflection of, the economic expansion and activities which occurred in downtown Statesboro during the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

The district is significant in the area of commerce because it was associated with, and today reflects, the commercial expansion and activities which occurred in response to Statesboro's early 20th-century economic prosperity. Statesboro was founded in 1802, but its physical development did not commence until 1889 with the coming of the railroad. With its commerce tied to the Sea Island cotton market, Statesboro prospered from 1890 until the Great Depression of the 1930s. The West Main Street Commercial Historic District developed near the county courthouse and was among the first commercial sections of downtown Statesboro. Since the early 20th century, commercial structures in the district have housed various businesses. Because Statesboro is the county seat, the district has continued to serve the retail, service, and entertainment needs of both the city and the county.

In the area of architecture, the district is significant for containing intact historic commercial buildings in downtown Statesboro. Several builders worked within the district. L. R. Blackburn has been associated with the commercial construction which occurred in this district and the rest of the central business district. These buildings are typical of the small-town commercial architecture that was popular in the late 19th and early 20th centuries in Statesboro and throughout Georgia and the nation. Significant features include the overall "storefront" design of the buildings in the district and decorative details including pressed-metal and corbeled brick cornices. Five of the storefronts in the district are built in a row and comprise the best preserved early 20th-century commercial group in Statesboro.

Section 8

National Register Criteria

Because of its association with the commercial expansion and activity experienced by Statesboro during the early 20th century and its continued importance as a retail center for Statesboro, the district meets National Register criteria A. Because the district exhibits building types, architectural styles, and architectural details common to small-town, commercial structures of the early part of the 20th century but unusual in Statesboro, including storefront designs, corbeling, and pressed-metal cornices, the district meets National Register Criteria C.
