DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This is a two-story house of late Italian Villa design, with the typical wide eaves but without supporting brackets. Heads of window and door openings have segmentally arched hood molds. On the left wall as one faces the house is a single-story bay window. On the right front, the appearance indicates that there was once a porch which has now been entirely removed except for the platform. Also, there was once a cupola on the roof. This remains intact in the attic so that it could be restored if funds were available. The house is built of locally produced cream colored brick, and the interior woodwork is largely of fine oak, undoubtedly cut at the builder's sawmill.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The greater significance of this house derives from the local importance of its builder and his prominence in the industrial and commercial development of the community of Mauston.

Benjamin Boorman, a pioneer grain miller and sawmill operator, learned his craft as a young apprentice in upstate New York. He came to Mauston in 1864 and purchased the sawmill, dam and water rights from the General M. M. Maughs estate located on the Lemonweir River, which had inexhaustible water power for his operations.¹ However, a fire destroyed his complete operation in 1869. Boorman rebuilt the flour and grist mill on the south bank of the river on the site of the original.

Called one of Mauston's "...pushing, go-ahead men...", Boorman became one of the city's wealthiest businessmen.² He was a banker; president of a joint stock company that built the Mauston Plow and Iron Works, Foundry, and Planing Mill; a member of the firm of E. L. Anderson and Company, dealers in general merchandise; and a partner in Anderson and Boorman, dealers in wood and railroad ties. By the time of his death in 1886, Boorman's milling company was one of the largest operations of its kind in the area. The combined annual profit on the flour, feed, and lumber business for the year ending 1880 was estimated to be $120,000.00, a considerable sum for that time.³

Although architecture is indicated as an area of significance, it is only marginal in general terms but locally important in the remaining early architecture of Mauston. The Boorman house now serves as the museum of the Juneau County Historical Society.

Verbal Boundary Description (Describe the boundaries of the property.)

The historic boundary of the Benjamin Boorman House consists of an irregular ten-sided polygon that encompasses the Benjamin Boorman House, surrounding domestic space historically associated with the residence, and a noncontributing garage. The northern boundary runs east to west (starting at the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk) for 151 feet, jogs south for 20 feet and continues west for 352 feet. The western boundary runs north-south for 220 feet and connects the northern and the southern boundary lines. The southern boundary runs west to east for 502 feet, ending at the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk. Beginning at its intersection with the southern boundary, the eastern boundary runs north for 15 feet along the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk, then runs along the edges of a small separate tax parcel set within the larger Boorman House parcel. The small parcel measures 65 feet on each side. North of this, the eastern boundary continues to run north along the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk for 160 feet until it meets the northern boundary. (See included site map.)

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

The original National Register nomination for the Benjamin Boorman House prepared in 1976 did not include a boundary map, or a boundary description or justification. However, the nomination stated that the nominated property consists of 2 acres. Accordingly, the historic boundary has been determined to follow the 2 acre tax parcel as it existed when the nomination was written.

The historic boundary has been delineated to encompass the Benjamin Boorman House and the surrounding domestic space historically associated with the property. A separate tax parcel in the southeast corner of the Boorman tax parcel is not included in this historic boundary as this 65 foot square parcel was created in 1962, fourteen years before the Boorman House was listed in the National Register of Historic Places.
