STATEMENT

The Petersen Warehouse, like its neighbor to the East (RD-W118), illustrates Davenport's adoption of the Chicago commercial style at the turn of the century. The internal structural system is clearly expressed in the facade, although conservatively. Clad in brick, which permits large window areas and thus better daylight illumination. Wide segmental arches at 4th floor and above the entrance are simply decorative elements - reminders of earlier forms of commercial architecture. These features, and the treatment of the entrance, give the building a slightly "dated" look, in comparison with its more frankly "modern" neighbor.
