Amended Items in Nomination:

Classification:

The Number of Resources within Property is amended to delete the three (3) non-contributing resources, as these are not within the limited bounds of the nomination property as redefined in the Verbal Boundary Description (see below). The revised Resource Count should read: 1 contributing building.

Significance:

Criteria. Criteria Consideration B must be checked for properties removed from their original location. [Generally, properties removed from their historic location are not eligible for listing in the National Register, except under special circumstances. According to the nomination, the First Bank of Hilo building was relocated from its historic location c. 1927, which conformed to the end date of the period of significance and the building's significant operation as a banking institution. This would normally preclude eligibility under Criterion A. With this SLR the listing is being revised to extend the period of significance up to the Depression era c. 1929 to reflect the building's continued function as a commercial building on its new site under the ownership of M.S. Botelho. The property was moved for commercial purposes and the building remained a functioning component of the community's Mamane Street commercial district after the relocation. The period may be amended in the future based on additional local contextual research. As a result the building meets National Register Criteria Consideration B as a building removed from its original location but which is primarily significant for architectural value (Criterion C) and as resource moved from one location on its original site to another location during its period of significance.]

Period of Significance. The listing is revised to extend the period of significance up to the Depression era--c. 1929--to reflect the building's continued function as a prominent commercial building on its new site under the ownership of important local businessman M.S. Botelho.

Geographical Data:

Acreage. The Acreage is revised to read: less than one (1) acre.

Verbal Boundary Description. The verbal boundary description is revised to read as follows: The nominated parcel is restricted to the footprint of the historic bank building with its rear addition as located on a portion of Lot 4 and outlined in red on the maps on page 8.23 and on pages 9.63-64. The small enclosed structure to the west of the bank building was formerly a covered, open-air patio set between neighboring buildings and erected outside the period of significance. It was not connected historically to the bank building, which retains its intact fenestrated exterior wall. The other resources located in the larger adjacent parcel and not included in this nomination listing.

The HAWAII SHPO was notified of this amendment.

The First Bank of Hilo Building in Honoka'a is a single story commercial building which sits on a portion of a larger 1.05 acre, sloping lot on the makai side of Māmane Street. The building is located on a street lined with commercial structures and contributes to the retail-office character of the town's downtown core. The façade is characterized by a false front with a modillion-like bracketed cornice and a corrugated metal, pent-roofed awning over the sidewalk mounted above the commercial level. The 4,000 square foot building follows a rectangular plan, with a front-facing, corrugated metal gable roof behind the false front. A similarly clad, shed-roofed addition is to the rear of the building. The building sits on a post and pier foundation with vertical slat aprons running down the sides. At the front, the building is flush with the sidewalk. The building features double wall construction with vertical tongue-and-groove exterior walls on the sides, while the façade and rear are finished with shiplap siding. The building is in good condition and retains its integrity of location, design, materials, setting, craftsmanship, feeling and association.

Narrative Description

Exterior

The First Bank of Hilo Ltd. Building is located on a downward sloping, 1.05-acre lot. The lot itself contains four structures: two eligible commercial edifices known as the First Bank of Hilo Building (1910/1922) and the larger Botelho Building and Garage (1927) on Māmane Street, a recently constructed building between the two (which will not be included in this nomination), and a makai residence (which will not be included in this nomination) on Koa Street (1938). The lot is a parallelogram in shape. This nomination is focused on the First Bank of Hilo Building only.

The First Bank of Hilo Building's façade abuts Māmane Street and is separated from the street by a wood sidewalk that surmounts the original concrete sidewalk. The sidewalk is accessed by two concrete steps from the Waipi'o side of the building and by a wood ramp on the Hilo side. An 'ōhi'a (native Hawai'i tree) hitching-post/railing with four posts runs along the sidewalk, further demarcating the building from the road. The building is four bays wide, and houses a single commercial unit in a large open space, which at this time houses a restaurant and bar. The building's two end bays have fixed windows, each of two horizontal panes. The two center bays each contain doors. The Waipi'o-side doorway has a set of double doors, each of two panes with a panel below. The Hilo-side doorway has a single-hinged door of similar design. The shed-roofed awning over the sidewalk is structurally supported by six wooden brackets.

The Hilo-side of the First Bank of Hilo has three sets of apertures. Photographs from 1936 do not show any openings (which makes sense considering this 1910 wooden structure was once a financial institution). Ventilation was undoubtedly a consideration as photographs from the 1960s-1970s show two openings with awning windows. (These windows do not affect the historic integrity of the building.) The third aperture (not visible in public viewing space) is a double-set of louvered windows within the Hilo-side of the shed-roofed extension on the back of the building.

The Waipi'o side of the First Bank of Hilo has three sets of apertures. The mauka-most features two sets of what were once windows that might have been re-engineered into four awning windows (see photograph bottom of page 26). The second aperture is a single double-hung window which now looks into the adjacent non-contributing new structure. The third aperture was once a double-hung window but now is simply screened and presents a view into the adjacent non-contributing building.

First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. historic windows and doors are demarked by red rectangles. The four Waipi'o-side awning windows and the one Hilo-side door which can be also viewed from the public space have no exact historic dates, but appear in photographs from the 1960s-1970s.

The makai-side of the First Bank of Hilo Building is the most complex portion of the structure. The main building's back gable roof with traditional air vent, maximizes heat dissipation in the main building. A shed-roof extension was appended below the gable. Most of the shed-roof extension also employs the same shiplap cladding as the front façade and the back gable of the main building. The shed extension has been altered in efforts to create more useful space inside the building, and its components were probably repaired/replaced due to its position facing prevailing winds and rain. Beginning on the Hilo side, T1-11 siding has been employed to enclose the top landing of a wooden staircase leading to the ground. A five-paneled wooden door with original knob leads outside. Six pane single-hung sash windows have remained both parallel to these wooden stairs and on the Hilo-most-side of the back main wall. Two adjacent sets of double-hung windows have been removed from the center of the makai wall and replaced with two vertical columns of jalousie glass. Further to the Waipi'o-side, the makai wall itself has been added to, using tongue-and-groove materials and a single double-hung window replaced with a column of jalousies. Most toward Waipi'o, plywood has been employed and a sheet of plexiglass (with a diamond-shaped pattern) shields an outdoor lanai. Wooden stairs from the lanai lead to the ground.

The understory of the building consists mostly of crawlspace with a dirt floor and a maximum ceiling height of approximately 7 feet on the makai side. The main floor above is supported by posts and piers resting directly on rocks placed on the ground. The space is enclosed by a vertical wood skirt on the three sides away from the street, except for a small, concrete-floored, storage space placed against the makai edge of the building envelope. This storage-space wall is of board-and-batten construction, inexpertly built, featuring an original wood-framed, sliding window of six panes.

Interior

The front doors open on a large open room that comprises the main public space of the business occupying the building. The room retains its original fir floor, but its walls are now finished with knotty-pine tongue and groove paneling. An interior girt runs around the room, just below the mid-line of the front windows. Two sets of single-pane, awning windows are located along the Waipi'o (west) side of the room. Each set is stacked two-high. Three repurposed windows that were once double-hung, one on the Waipi'o side and two on the Hilo side, reflect elaborate woodwork on their frames, including vertical grooves the length of the frame perimeters and disks at the corners. The ceiling of the room is divided into four "quadrants" by four horizontal beams of differing thicknesses supported by a central column. Three of the four quadrants (clockwise 1, 2 and 4) retain the original ceiling woodwork.

While the rear areas of the building have been remodeled, the room now utilized for kitchen (ovens) retains its original walls, ceiling, and two elaborate window frames (of the same style as those in the public space).

The building's makai exterior and its interior alterations (created to suit the needs of the retail space), are not visible from the public viewing space, and therefore do not affect the historic and architectural integrity of the entire building. The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd., constructed in 1910, is in good condition and retains its integrity of location, design, materials, setting, craftsmanship, feeling and association.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd.–Hāmākua Branch is eligible for the National Register of Historic Places on the local level under Criteria A (Events) and C (Architecture).

The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building is significant at the local level under National Register Criteria A in the areas of Commerce and Architecture. The bank was established on the TMK: (3) 4-5-016: 010 property, in 1910 in a wood-framed building. The First Bank of Hilo Ltd. is a significant reflection of the commercial development of Honoka‘a as an important, early twentieth-century trade center for the local (sugar) plantation workers, cattle ranchers, coffee growers, and store owners as an illustration of the efforts of immigrants through a banking institution to make a place for themselves in the local island economy. From 1922-1927 the Bank of Hawai‘i continued to serve the town’s banking interests in this building.

Period of Significance, 1910-1927, spans the time from the building’s construction throughout the period that the building was used for banking.

The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building is significant at the local level under Criterion C as a good example of a Territorial Era commercial building constructed in a rural community on the island of Hawai‘i during the early years of the twentieth century. It is typical of its period in its use of materials, method of construction, craftsmanship, and design.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Criterion A (Events/History):

Historical Events

Three factors influenced the initial village location of Honoka‘a, a crossroads in the 1880s through the end of the 19th century: (1) the landing at Haina, one of the few areas along the shore with direct access to the sea, fostered the development of a sugar mill (and employment) immediately downslope of what became Honoka‘a; (2) the establishment of the first wagon road (i.e. Government Road) that crossed the Hāmākua District, built mauka of the coast to lessen construction difficulties, concentrated overland travel within a narrow corridor; (3) and also, the purchase of a grant and location of a residence by William Rickard, who managed Honoka‘a Sugar Company (the most successful of the early sugar plantations in Hāmākua), focused activity along a specific section of that wagon road.

County and State

Honoka'a is a town where the opportunities for the present and future are incubated in its historic past. While homesteading, ranching, coffee, and macadamia nuts were important to the area economy, the town's history is most directly associated with the establishment of Hawai'i's sugar industry. The impetus for the development of Honoka'a Town rested with the influx of early immigrant workers (1860-1900) brought in as laborers on the sugar plantations after the expiration of their labor contracts.

Other entrepreneurial immigrants not bound by plantation labor contracts arrived. There were successive waves of immigrants from Europe and New England, China, Portugal (Madeira and the Azores), Japan, Korea, Philippines, and other countries gave individuals the opportunity to seek new employment opportunities. Small, independent stores outside the plantation economy hegemony developed as the norm in rural areas throughout the Hawaiian Islands of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Contrary to popular myth, the entrepreneurs who founded these companies often came to Hawai'i with mercantile experience gained in the old country or had acquired such skills working in stores run by the plantations themselves. Establishment of a business by an entrepreneur required capital, and First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. was a leading institution. First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. (1910, chartered in 1901), People's Bank (chartered in 1916), and Bank of Hawai'i (1922) were established in Honoka'a. Banks were life-lines needed to grow a town. They collected money bring capital in to town, and then lent it out. If a community were to grow beyond a certain level money needed to be collected for investment and to build businesses.

Another factor was the economic and population growth that occurred as Hāmākua plantations consolidated and expanded, creating greater cane yields from massive infrastructure projects such as the Upper (1907) and Lower (1910) Hāmākua (Irrigation) Ditches and requiring additional labor to function. Changes in plantation technologies, including the introduction and use of trucks, ended the isolation of most plantation workers at their work sites. The new concentration of plantation housing into larger camps brought economies of scale, which facilitated improved standards of living and provided a place where different ethnic groups could socialize. The desire of plantation employees for further goods and services unavailable within the plantation hegemony led those potential customers to towns such as Honoka'a.

Still another factor was the potential arrival of the Hilo Railway into Honoka'a which on focused land speculation and building construction on the Hilo side of town. Apparently Judge Manuel S. Botelho thought it best to buy a large property fronting on Māmane Street with the makai rear of the property immediate to the proposed railroad terminus. Unfortunately, financial strains caused by high construction costs through the rough topography of Hāmākua bankrupted the rail company and the line never reached beyond Pa'auilo, seven miles away. But the continued expansion of public services in Honoka'a, including courts, a library, and schools on the Hilo side of town, was a distinct economic advantage for the town's economy over those of other villages nearby, and brought educated workers to the town.

A series of government road building projects in the 1920s led to the development of more direct routes between Honoka'a and Waimea. Peripheral communities such as Kukuihaele further north were by-passed. Where Lehua Street crossed Māmane Street and Pakalana Street met Māmane became major intersections in Honoka'a. Development of Honoka'a then focused between these two points.

Property Histories

The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building resided on two properties. The short history is as follows (please see Table of Property Transfers [pp. 77-79] for more detailed information). In the 1840s and 1850s the western educated and progressive King Kamehameha III, under pressure from foreign residents, and to assure that the dwindling population of Native Hawaiians retained land as an asset, instituted the Mahele or "Portioning" (Jon Chinen, The Great Mahele, 1958). The Mahele introduced western style property ownership to the Kingdom, with all property formerly owned by the King distributed first to the crown, then the ali'i, and finally the maka'āinana or common people. On November 8, 1857 during the distribution to the maka'āinana, King Kamehameha IV awarded the 11.25-acre Land Commission Award (LCA) 7851 and Royal Patent Grant 7039 in Haina Ahupua'a fronting the Government Road in Honoka'a to Kawi (also spelled Kaiwi) for $2. (Both: Bureau of Conveyances, Land Commission Award, Book 4, p. 618; and Hawai'i Sugar Planters Association, Hāmākua Coast Map Book—Cane Field 19 map, July 1912, n.p., Honoka'a, Hawai'i).

The property was sold to Samuel Parker and then a portion of the property was sold from Parker to John T. Baker. In 1910 Baker leased the property to the First Bank of Hilo, Ltd.; and the bank was established in the wood-framed building on this property in 1910. (see page 81, Addendum B)

November 26, 1910 lease between John T. Baker and First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. (TMK: (3) 4-5-016: 010 The Bureau of Conveyances Liber 837/462 Deed from Grantors the Estate of John T. Baker to the Grantee Bank of Hawai'i, Ltd., August 25, 1926 for the portion of the property described as Royal Patent Grant 7039, Land Commission Award 7851 originally to Kawi.

Sometime between 1922 and 1927, the bank building was moved to the Botelho property where it sits today. In 1857, this Royal Patent Grant 2465 property in Papanui Ahupua'a initially passed from Kamehameha IV to Olepau et al and then to daughter Aulike Paakiki and to Alice Spencer. This property became the Spencer Tract in 1920. Also in 1920 Alice and Samuel Spencer sold lots 1-4 and 13-16 to Manuel S. Botelho. Later this property passed through family hands from Mary Botelho (wife), to Mary and Thelma Olival (daughter), to the Olival Estate and Botelho Properties, Inc. today. (see page 78-79, Addendum B)

First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. Building History

1914 Honokaa map by Japanese National Nekketsu Takei (Hawaii Ichiran) shows the proliferation of Japanese retailing activities as well as the First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. Honokaa's population at that time was approximately 400. Māmane Street runs horizontally across the map.

First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building has evidenced creative adaptive reuse. The bank building has had both a single-occupant and a double-occupant interior, and has had many occupants—First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. (in its earliest location shown in the map above), and Bank of Hawai'i (doing business in both early and current locations between 1922 and 1927). Then it was Judge Manuel S. Botelho's law office. Other Botelho property tenants since the move have included the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, Edith Fujimoto Dress Shop, Miura Tailor Shop, Hāmākua Sports Bar, and The Landing, among others.

The fire exits and stairs are not historic but are mandated (yellow). (A 2016 Google Map overlay was used to clarify these present day structures on the property.)

The non-contributing new structure adjacent to the Waipi‘o side of the First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. abuts the First Bank building, but is structurally independent of the First Bank. It is of very recent origin (2011-2015). It does not compromise the historic integrity of the First Bank building.

Window and Hitching Post Alteration History

The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building when viewing it from Māmane Street has remained almost as it was in 1910, with the exception of a hitching post/safety railing and windows inserted on the Hilo and Waipi‘o sides. These do not compromise the historic integrity of the First Bank building.

Hawai'i Banking History

The Civil Code of the Hawaiian Islands established banking practices on May 17, 1859.

Prior to Territorial status, there were no banking establishments on Hawai'i Island. All transactions, including buying and selling goods and services, debt payments, and savings were restricted to the exchange or payment of specie. No checks or currency system existed. The plantations functioned as ad hoc banks allowing skilled plantation workers to build up their accounts on the plantation's books that could then be drawn upon when necessary, though this method discouraged saving, as no interest accrued. Mercantile establishment activities resulted in the accumulation of large sums of coin, and these funds were transferred by express to Honolulu through agencies that represented all the banks in Hawai'i. Some people stored their savings in a "chimney place," akin to today's "hiding it under the mattress." As plantations and other businesses grew, the use of specie proved unwieldy, and the transfer of that specie off island to Honolulu proved increasingly unsafe. (Cecil G. Tilton. The History of Banking in Hawaii, 1927)

Between the 1830s and the opening of Bishop & Co. (later First Hawaiian Bank) in 1858, business transactions were conducted in a variety of ways; barter between merchants who based business dealings on trust and friendship, movement of specie via ship from one island to another, and letters relayed via a "friend's friend" to name a few. These methods were subject to dishonesty, robbery, or the sinking of the ship carrying funds to another port. Without a Kingdom currency, businesses had to depend primarily on gold or sterling offered at a certain price payable on demand and merchants began to use "bills of exchange" which carried no monetary value in themselves, but were taken as valid promises to pay in cash or other goods. They could also be bought and sold at interest or to lock in the price of goods. Though more secure, this method still left little room for profit. (Tilton, 1927)

The story of banking began in the whaling period in 1858 (Tilton, 1927). And at the end of the 19th century, the Hawai'i sugar industry and its supporting industries of shipping and refining joined forces with banks in Hawai'i and entered into the burgeoning U.S. and emerging global markets.

Banking History in Hāmākua

Honoka'a Town as the second largest town on Hawai'i Island suggests that there was a general need for banking in Hāmākua. Hilo, the largest town was distant, so bank branches allowed for Māmane Street business people to walk to and deposit receipts of the day.

First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. History

The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. was the first bank to be established on the Island of Hawai'i (Tilton, p. 121), but it was not until 1910 that the Hāmākua Branch lease was signed and the bank was in operation.

“Thrift means progress,” the bank officers “welcome small depositors,” and “Every man, woman or child should have a bank account of some size” are just some of the enticements to designed to encourage banking. They also reassured depositors that their accounts will be in “perfect safety.”

We Want
Small Accounts.

Some people dislike to enter the doors of a bank. Why? Because they think their small business is too trifling for the banker to bother about. We invite such people to come in and use this bank. We are in business purposely to be bothered. Every man, woman or child should have a bank account of some size and we want to help as many people in this community as we can to find a bank account profitable.

We have the character, strength and ability to serve you. Will you give us the opportunity?

People's Bank of Hilo, Ltd.

The People's Bank of Hilo, Ltd. was the second bank to be established on the Island of Hawai'i. It also had branches in Hāmākua, Kohala, Kau, and Kona. The People's Bank was chartered in 1916, and the branch referred to as Hāmākua branch and was located in Honoka'a. It is not known which building it was located in but the one extant photograph suggests that it might be the Sakata Building or another single-story Māmane Street frontage Waipi'o of Lehua Street.

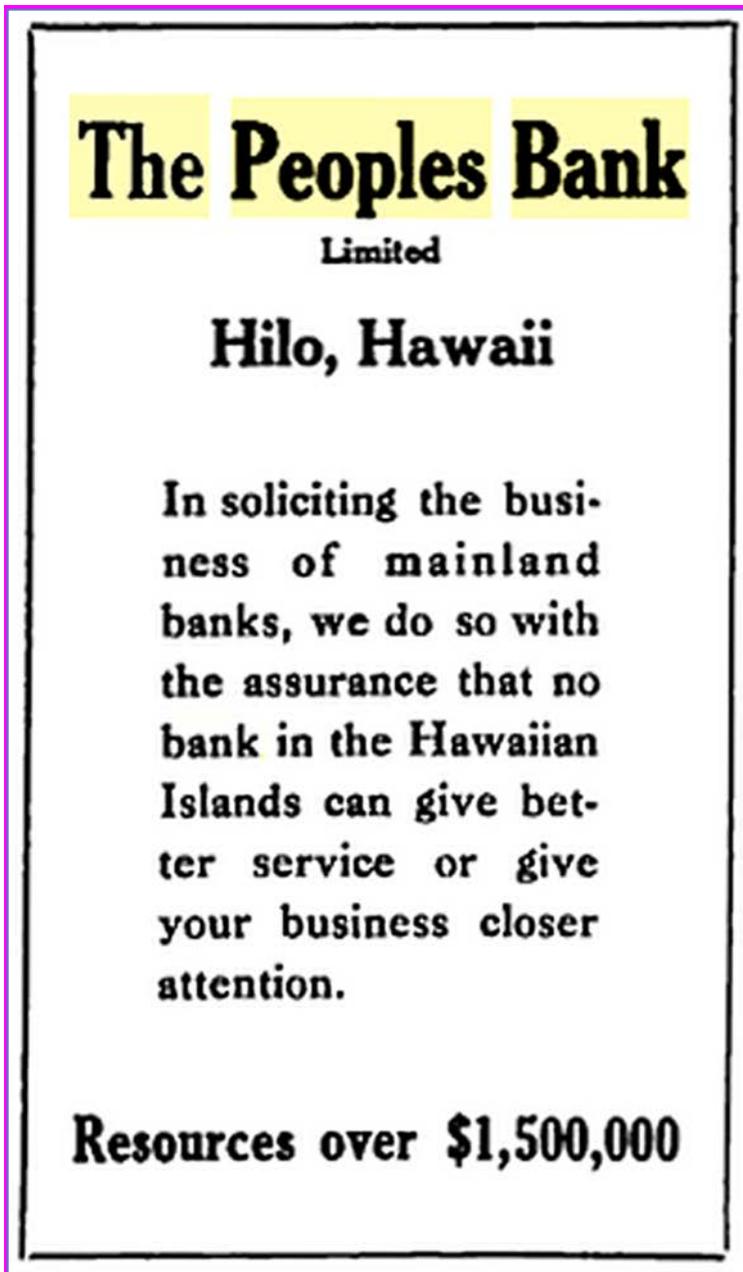

SAILING FOR THE SUN—THE CHINESE IN HAWAII 1789-1989

This photo would be dated sometime between 1916 and 1922. The kanji sign to the left of the doorway says Jinmin (people) Ginkou (bank [not very clear]) Ha-ma-ku-a (in katakana) Shiten (branch), mirroring the painted lettering “People’s Bank–Hāmākua Branch” on the window to the right.

Sailing for the Sun asserted that the People’s Bank was “an early Chinese banking venture in Hāmākua” (p.83), though the branch’s storefront sign to the left of the doorway in the photo above is written in both kanji and katakana indicating that it catered to Japanese Americans, and its officers of the bank were European Americans. The People's Bank ended abruptly in 1922:

“The Security Trust Company, in addition to its involvement with the Halaulani Place tract, was involved with a number of other real estate development projects, having acquired and sold lots in Keawehane, the Wailaa Heights tract, Wailoa Heights, Waiakea, and Puueo, all of which are in Hilo. The trust company was closely linked with the People's Bank, with both organizations sharing many of the same directors and officers. In addition, the Securities Trading Company also had close dealings with the Security Trust Company, handling the acquisition and sale of stocks and securities. The People's Bank ran into fiscal difficulties in 1921 when the stock market, as well as sugar prices, dropped dramatically. The bank withstood a September 1921 run by its customers, but a second run on February 18, 1922, led to the closing of the bank. On Monday, February 20, 1922, the courts named the Waterhouse Trust Company, which had advanced the People's Bank $250,000 to keep it afloat following the September run, as receiver for both the bank and the Security Trust Company. An investigation prompted by the failure of these financial organizations led to the conviction of their vice president, H.A. Truslow, for embezzlement. The Waterhouse Trust sold the Security Trust company's assets at auction in May 1922, including four lots on Halaulani Place.” (Halaulani Multiple Property Nomination; SHPD p. 2)

THREE INDICTED FOR HILO BANK FAILURE

HILO, T. H., April 3.—Three indictments were returned here today against three former officials of the Peoples bank of Hilo, which failed recently, and the Security Trust company. The bank's failure was the first such event in the history of the Hawaiian islands and was the subject of an inquiry by Attorney General Harry Irwin.

Those indicted were: J. W. Russell, a former director and a member of the territorial senate, who was instrumental in organizing the bank; H. A. Truslow, formerly vice president and manager of the bank, and Leslie Forrest, formerly cashier.

This front-page headline April, 1922 Sacramento Union announced the demise of People's Bank of Hilo.

Conclusion:

First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building is eligible for the Hawai'i and National Registers of Historic Places at the Local Level under Criteria A (History/Events) and C (Architecture) due to its significance as a small-town bank branch and its period architecture.

The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building is eligible at the local level for Criterion A. The building is locally significant under National Register Criteria A and C in the areas of Commerce, and Architecture. The bank was established at its earliest location in 1910 in a wood-framed building. The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd.–Hāmākua Branch is a significant reflection of the commercial development of Honoka'a as an important, early twentieth-century trade center for the local (sugar) plantation workers, cattle ranchers, and coffee growers and store owners as an illustration of the efforts of immigrants through a banking institution to make a place for themselves in the local island economy. The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. commercial function did not change, but underwent a seamless transition when it merged with Bank of Hawai'i; nor did its building structure change when it was moved up the street to its current Botelho property location.

The building's simple yet commanding presence on Honoka'a's main street established First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. as an important focal point for local commerce. [The property meets the Registration Requirements established in the MPS cover document for the Commercial Building property type.] The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building is eligible at the local level for Criterion C as a good example of adaptive reuse for this commercial plantation-style architecture. This small town main street commercial building is typical of its period.

Banking activities occupied the whole of the building from 1910 to 1927. On the basis of this, the wood-framed false-front single-story plantation-style Territorial Era First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. building in Honoka'a exhibits exemplary craftsmanship in its use of materials, method of construction, design, and feeling; and is typical of buildings constructed in a rural community on the island of Hawai'i during the early twentieth century.

Abstract/Summary Comments: The First Bank of Hilo, Ltd. is locally significant under National Register Criteria A and C in the areas of Commerce and Architecture. First constructed around 1910, the one-story, false-front building is a good example of a Territorial Era commercial building constructed in a rural community on the island of Hawaii during the early years of the twentieth century. The building served as home to the First Bank of Hilo until 1927 and various later commercial operations and is a significant reflection of the commercial development of Honokaa as an important, early twentieth-century trade center for the local plantation workers, cattle ranchers, coffee growers, and store owners. The property meets the registration requirements of the Historical and Architectural Resources of Honoka'a Town MPS.

Recommendation/ Criteria: Accept NR Criteria A and C.
