~~FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE~~

DANIEL S. SCHANCK OBSERVATORY -- This unusual-looking building is a replica of the horologium in ancient Athens, the so-called "Tower of the Winds." The original building, some parts of which still stand in Athens, was built as an eight-sided structure to represent the eight principal winds of the earth.

The building was erected for the use of classes in astronomy at Rutgers by Daniel S. Schanck in 1865. The structure cost over $6,000. Mr. Schanck, who was the head of a firm of glass merchants, also presented the University with some scientific equipment.
