18. Description Rectangular, one-room frame church building with gable roof. Facade at gable end has double doors one side, tower on other. One-story square tower has open belfry with steeple over bellcast tower roof. Tower has single door, windows, and serves as a vestibule. The belfry and vestibule are later additions, date unknown. The pulpit platform is on the same wall as the entry (Cont. on next page)		31. Endangered Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
19. History According to the Minutes of the Session of Pennsylvania Run Church, a building fund was begun in 1840 "for the purpose of erecting a new church which would better accomodate the congregation." The present structure was built that year on the site of an earlier log building. The congregation was organized by Scotch-Irish Presbyterians from Pennsylvania in 1789 and (Cont. on next page)		32. 20. Significance Pennsylvania Run Church is one of a few nineteenth-century, rural church buildings remaining in Jefferson County. The austere frame structure is typical of early rural meeting houses and the added vestibule-tower and belfry do not detract from the integrity of the building. supported by square columns parallel to the ridge line. The interior is characterized by a lack of decoration. All moldings are very simple. There is a shallow niche with wood molding centered between the doors behind the pulpit. This is the only decoration. In 1949 a basement was completed to provide space for Sunday School classes and a fellowship hall. The basement does not diminish the overall integrity of the structure.

"supply" ministers were sent periodically by the Transylvania Presbytery. In 1799 a full-time minister was "called" by the church, and presumably the first (log) structure had been built by then. The cemetery was there by 1795 - that is the earliest known burial date on a tombstone. The church split in the 1860s and the Southern sympathizers at Pennsylvania Run formed a new church. In 1965 the Pennsylvania Run congregation moved to a new building and deeded this church building to the trustees of the cemetery.

cemetery surrounding the church is significant since it dates from the 1790s the earliest period of the congregation's establishment. Many families who were among the earliest settlers in this area of Jefferson County are buried in the cemetery. William Cummins, a founder of the church, who died in 1795, is also buried there.

character of this block. 317-23 Wenzel (photo 274) are residential structures built 1900-05, and include late Victorian and shotgun styles. Various decorative elements are used on these frame structures including fish scale shingles, bracketed cornices, and lathe-turned spindles. Cabel Baptist Church, at 312, is a modern brick building that must be considered an intrusion.

408-14 Wenzel is a group of four shotgun residences, two frame and two brick. 414 is an intact, brick camelback, ca. 1875, with rounded window panes. 417 is a two-story commercial building, ca. 1880. Stone piers in the storefront are intact, as are the stone lintels and enriched cornice above. 419-21 (photo 273) is an early, two-story double residence, with simple openings and cornice. Next door at 423, a shotgun residence has been encased in concrete block and its openings altered radically. The cornice is largely intact.

509-523 S. Wenzel (photo 271) sits on a triangular lot at the point created by Wenzel and Chestnut St. The style incorporated into this house is a one-and-one-half-story frame cottage with a fine, lathe-turned-spindled porch across the facade. 514-16 are two, brick shotguns, ca. 1890 (photo 270).
