Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The James Smith Homestead of Kennebunk, Maine, built in 1753, is a large well preserved example of a rural dwelling in the Georgian style.

The $2\frac{1}{2}$ -story house is of frame (post-and-beam) construction with gable roof, large central chimney, clapboard siding, 12/12 fenestration, and field-stone foundation. The facade, which faces south-west, is five bays wide with a central entrance. This entrance consists of a single door beneath an arch, framed by pilasters and a broken triangular pediment.

The gable-ends of the house are two bays wide. Attached to the southeast end of the building is a $1\frac{1}{2}$ -story ell with small 6-light casements at the second-story level. An additional entrance to the house faces southwest. The ell is five bays long and contains a small brick chimney.

Southeast of the house and ell is a large, gable-roofed, two-story barn of c.1880, with shingled siding on its sides and clapboards on its ends. The end facing the house contains a large sliding door with ornate panels. A wing with shed roof is attached to the northwest side of the barn. A secondary doorway faces south-west.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

This plain but more than ample Georgian farmhouse dates from a period of marked prosperity which occurred in southwestern Maine between 1750 and 1760. Most of the towns in the area had, like Kennebunk, been depopulated during the Indian uprisings of 1690 and after. Resettlement began about 1715 but, for a number of years, growth was slow. By 1750 established roads and beaten paths from house to house and town to town facilitated travel and trade. Good farming land was especially sought for and many lots were purchased for improvement by industrious and energetic men, who at once began the work of clearing, cultivating and erecting dwelling houses.

Such a one was James Smith of York who purchased in 1753, 50 acres of a 600 acre grant held by Caleb Littlefield and Company on the north side of Alewive Brook. This lot, with the house thereon, which was erected shortly after its purchase, was the homestead of Smith during the remainder of his life, as well as the lifelong home of his son, grandson and great granddaughter.

The main house, set far back from the road, stands today virtually unchanged, an important survival from the early years of Maine's colonial emergence.
