garden typifies the garden style associated with the Greek Revival in Georgia's Piedmont. The rear garden is designed in the informal style with sweeping lawns and mature trees which are under-planted with flowering trees and shrubs. A feature of the rear garden is a rose garden designed by Dr. Hubert B. Owens, Dean of the University's School of Environmental Design, when the property was acquired by the University.

This outstanding example of Greek Revival architecture was built by John Thomas Grant in 1856. Grant later sold the home to Benjamin H. Hill. Medora Field Perkerson reports in her book, White Columns in Georgia, that Hill, while living in the house, was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives and book, later to the Senate. He is credited with influencing President Hayes to withdraw Federal occupation troops and military rule from Georgia, thus ending the Reconstruction Era in 1877, a dozen years after the end of the war. The house changed hands three times in 1883, being sold to James White, Founder of the First National Bank of Athens, in July of that year. It was inherited by White's daughter, the late Mrs. W. F. Bradshaw, and was acquired from her estate by the Bradley Foundation, of Columbus, Georgia: which presented it to the University of Georgia as a home for its president; subsequent to its acquisition of the house in 1949, the University has restored the house and grounds to the luster of their earlier years. The house and grounds are now of "museum" status and serve as as an important example of the union of architecture and Landscape architecture within the context of the Greek Revival period in Georgia's piedmont.

As the home of the President of the University of Georgia, it has unusual cultural, historical and architectural significance for the entire state. It is a magnificently maintained symbol; a public monument; a work of architecture in the broad and profound senses of that term.
