A black and white photograph of a covered pavilion. The pavilion has a dark, gabled roof and is supported by several dark, cylindrical columns. A sign is mounted on the front edge of the roof, displaying the word "COOKEVILLE" in capital letters. The pavilion is situated on a grassy area. In the background, there is a body of water with several sailboats. To the left, a building with a tall chimney and a white car are visible. The sky is bright and clear.

JERE BAXTER

Founder, Builder and First President of the TENNESSEE CENTRAL RAILROAD

This tablet is placed here by the citizens of Knoxville in the memory of Jere Baxter, who conceived the idea of this road
and executed it by the cooperation of the people.

That I have kept up the marks I have left upon her shall testify for a point.
