Beginning at a point of intersection of two treelines in the southeastern corner of the yard that is 56 feet south/southeast of the southeastern corner of the house (A), 160 feet westward along southern treeline to intersection with another treeline (B), 150 feet northward along western treeline to edge of mowed yard (C); 180 feet eastward along line of yard/field boundary to treeline (D); 160 feet south/southwestward to point of origin.

The boundaries were chosen to encompass the house and its domestic-related outbuildings.

45. Description and House Plan:

Exterior: 2-story, 3-bay brick hall-parlor plan, original 1-story, 2-bay wing, wing raised to 2 stories later in 19th century, original 6/6 sash, Flemish bond principal facade(south), exterior end chimneys, gabled roof, coursed stone foundation, box cornice, earred surrounds added to central doors possibly at same time porch added and wing enlarged, segmental arched windows cut into east end wall probably at same time, shed-roofed frame kitchen with enclosed porch added to rear of wing may also be late 19th century. 2nd fl. door added w/ center passage inside to acheive form of typical mid-century Greek Revival center passage house. Interior: Hall-parlor plan altered on first floor to center passage by addition of frame partition to west of front door, all federal woodwork intact throughout the house including panelled alterations to the original floor plan, the hall-parlor form can still be easily identified, and the house retains all of its original federal woodwork which is some of the finest in the county. The alterations extend the period of significance to late19th c it was part of a general updating which included the facade, and represents the typical evolution of a house 45. Description and House Plan: (continued) in the region over time.

wainscot in both hall (west room) and parlor (east room), pin rails in both hall and wing, panelled door and window jambs, six-panel federal doors, second floor west room has federal mantel, chairrail, beaded baseboard, original railing from enclosed stairs in northwest corner, second floor east room has federal mantel, chairrail, and baseboard, enclosed stairs from northwest corner of parlor, graining visible on back of door of stairs, enclosed stairs in southwest corner of east room of ell open into west room; alterations include third quarter 19th century partition froming center passage, door in center bay of second floor; kitchen probably late 19th century, enclosed section at rear of passage is 20th century.

Outbuildings:

Board and batten meat house to east of main house is contributing. Also contributing is a board and batten gable-roofed structure to north of house with chimney of stone with brick flue on west end which may have served as a kitchen or wash house. Both are contributing structures because they demonstrate the use of the domestic space during the period of significance, as nothing indicates that either is not nearly contemporary with the house. The kitchen/wash house is an unusual survival.

The nominated area includes three contributing buildings and one non-contributing building (a board-and-batten shed of 20th century construction).
