DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Old Jailer's House is located on Courthouse Square in Louisa, the county seat of Lawrence County. The eight-room, two-story brick building was completed in 1889 and the Vinson family was the first to occupy it. From an older photograph it appears that the structure originally had a porch along the eastern front (photograph number 2) and a furnace room, attached to the west side. (photograph number 1) The furnace room, and porch which gave a slightly domestic appearance to the otherwise austere design, have since been removed. (photographs number 3 and 4) The massing is composed of several narrow asymmetrical blocks that break up the overall bulk of this substantial dwelling. (photographs number 3, 4, 5)

The original perforated cornice was removed when the building was painted white. The austere verticality of the building is countered by the corbelled horizontal belt courses and strongly projecting cornice, and almost flat roof. (photograph number 3) Neither the segmentalheaded windows nor the corbelled brick courses which accent them have been altered. These few details suggest a residual Italianate treatment.

The original jail was located at the rear of the Jailer's House. Judging from an older photograph it was a small stone building. (photograph number 1)

Other jails and buildings in the state reflect many of the same architectural forms as the Jailer's Residence. The same decorative work and massing is seen in the work of the McDonald Brothers of Louisville, at this period such as the Anderson County jail in Lawrenceburg.

Lawrence County, Kentucky, the birthplace and early home of the thirteenth Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, is located in the eastern part of the state. It was formed in 1821 and Louisa, its county seat, was established in 1822.

The Old Jailer's Residence is an effective symbol of the prominent role of that official in the community. It is primarily known as the birthplace of Fred M. Vinson, thirteenth Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. The building serves as a tangible reminder tof the social and political arena from which this favorite son of Eastern Kentucky emerged.

Fred M. Vinson was born in Louisa on January 22, 1890, into a family that had been in the Big Sandy Valley since the early 1800s. His father, James Vinson, was Lawrence County jailer at this time. The office of jailer has traditionally been one of utmost importance in the mountain communities, particularly during annual circuit He was in charge of the prisoners who were to court sessions. Vinson, as a child, sat outside the adjacent and gamble. courthouse and listened to the courtroom dialogue. It was natural that Vinson should be interested in local politics since his father held one of the more important political offices in the county.

Vinson's family moved to neighboring Catlettsburg in 1902 where James Vinson opened a resident hotel. The family returned to Louisa in 1905. Fred M. Vinson attended Kentucky Normal School there before he entered Centre Collgge, Danville, Kentucky. He was graduated in 1911 with the highest academic record in the history of the Law School. He also ranked as an outstanding college athlete due to his position as shortstop and captain of Centre's baseball team. At one time, he tried out for professional and Reconversion. The office of War Mobilization and Reconversion was responsible for formulating the basic plans for converting the economy from a war time to a peace time economy.

In July, 1945, President Harry S. Truman appointed Louisa's favorite son Secretary of the Treasury. His service as Treasury Secretary was cut short when on June 6, 1946 the President appointed him to the United States Supreme Court. The Senate unanimously supported this nomination. For seven years, until his death, Vinson served as thirteenth Chief Justice. Many of the Vinson opinions dealt not with large issues, but with questions of a technical and limited scope which were of the most interest to professionals. The most famous case before his Court was the McLaurin versus Oklahoma State Regents decision which laid the groundwork for the future racial discrimination decisions of the 1950s and 1960s. This case was a landmark decision on racial discrimination in higher education.

Vinson had a very close relationship with President Harry Truman. Truman was said to have enjoyed Vinson's eastern Kentucky humor and wit. Vinson often joked with his friends that he was 'born in jail.'' He told stories of his escapades with the prisoners in his father's jail. ''When I was about four or five years old, there was a convict in jail to whom I took a liking and I decided he didn't belong there. He hadn't told me he wanted out, but I made up my mind Idd help him escape. I got hold of a small hatchet and one day when no one was looking I walked up to his cell and slipped it through the bars.'' Fortunately, the prisoner confessed to Vinson Senior that his little boy had given him a present.

When Vinson died in 1953, he was buried in the Pine Hill Cemetery in Louisa.
