Description

A 1½ story butch colonial farmhouse, gable roof with curved swept overhangs, constructed of native fieldston accented with red sandstone sills and doorstrips; mortar of clay, straw, wool and horsehair; original beams; random width flooring; 12 on 12 pegged windows with much original glass; fireplaces with enclosed chimneys in each lower room and one in cellar for heat, cooking and baking.

Front hatchway led to dirt cellar floor; fireplace (1785) intact; firebed is 6' wide, 2' deep and lintel of 8' haved tree trunk. This and inside stairway construction is interesting. The main part of the house has a center hall with Dutch doors on each end to the exterior. There is a parlor with a fireplace and a smaller rear room on each side of the hall. Off one parlor is the three room attached resident guide's quarters wing. Off the other is the two room kitchen extension.

During the middle 1800's dormers were installed for beurooms. There are two fireplaces on the second floor. The present inside bathroom belongs to 20th century conveniences as does the central heating.

The living room of the resident-guide's 3-room attached quarters is believed to be the oldest part of the house.

The attractive grounds surrounding the building contain an herb garden with bee skep, orchard of old fashioned variety fruit trees, extensive lawn for gatherings such as annual Christmas tree lighting and carol sing, pit saw demonstration and a flag pole.

A first floor exhibit room has been completed for permanent displays and for individual collections.
