This SLR is issued to make the following technical and substantive correction:

Section 7

The historic district inventory in Section 7 lists as two separate properties the following:

68. Crescent Laundry (735 N. Farish): Ca. 1930. 2-story 9-bay brick commercial building with a crenelated, stepped-parapet roofline. Soldier brick frame windows. Floral tile rod caps. Canopy missing.

171. Commercial building (part of Crescent Laundry Complex, 735 N. Farish): 2-story concrete block building with gable roof. Intrusion.

The available information indicates that this is one functionally related building constructed by 1930 (possibly in two sections) with a large addition made sometime between 1962 and 1980. The inventory should have listed this as one property at 735 N. Farish. Although the concrete block addition was constructed outside the period of significance (circa 1860s to 1940s), the original portions of the building survives intact, and the division between the historic sections and the late twentieth century addition is clearly evident. Therefore, the property should continue to be designated as contributing to the historic district.

The inventory count should be reduced by the removal of No. 178 as a separate property listing.

Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District incorporates <sup>695</sup> 700 buildings located in a 125-acre area in downtown Jackson. Arranged on a grid pattern, the narrow streets of the district are bounded on all sides by wider streets. The area is further defined by Greenwood Cemetery on the east, railroad tracks on the west, and the Fortification Street overpass on the north. Farish and Mill streets, the two main north-south arteries, are predominantly commercial in character but become more residential north of Monument Street. Other streets are primarily residential, with small grocery stores dotting the neighborhood. A soybean-processing plant, an ice-cream plant, and a food-storage warehouse are three industries located in the district which also includes eight churches. Building height is low with commercial buildings being one or two stories high and dwellings usually only one story in height. Most commercial buildings are constructed of brick and most residences are frame. While the majority of residences date from the early twentieth century, a variety of vernacular building types and periods is represented. Two houses may possibly predate the Civil War. One is a Creole-cottage type with undercut gallery and paneled posts (154 Monument St.) and the other is a five-bay cottage with central entrance (208 E. Cohea St.). Creole cottages ca. 1880 remain on Blair and Cohea streets, and a cluster of Queen Anne-style L-plan cottages with polygonal bays is located on West Church Street. Individual houses of the Queen Anne type are also scattered throughout the district. Shotgun cottages ca. 1903 line one block of Farish and Church streets. Shotgun cottages are enriched with a variety of architectural details, from board-and-batten to bungalow-style porches and exposed rafter-tails. Many are enlarged with a variety of additions and in some cases have become additions themselves. Another common house type is the one-family Bungalow-style cottage found in single-family, duplex, and four-plex forms.

The most striking physical changes to the area include the construction in 1957 of a four-lane road which carves an S-shape through the district, interrupting the grid pattern and separating parts of the community, and the construction in the 1940s and '50s of rental housing in the inner cores of blocks. Although some of this housing is architecturally compatible, some is substandard, and most units are too close together, resulting in a lack of open space. Demolition has occurred in the area around Hamilton and Mill streets, creating new open space and several new buildings, and on West Monument Street, where a new supermarket and parking lots have been built. Only one of the churches has not been replaced by a new building. Two common but reversible alterations are the cladding of frame houses with asbestos and the replacement of original porch posts with metal pipe. Despite these alterations, the percentage of intrusions is at a low twenty percent, and the district maintains a cohesive intimate quality reflective of its early-twentieth-century growth and development.

All buildings are considered to contribute to the architectural and/or historical character of the neighborhood unless they are designated as marginal or intrusive. Contributing buildings may be key elements of the streetscape which possess outstanding architectural importance and integrity or may be "part-of-the-scene" buildings without outstanding significance but whose appearance is compatible in terms of materials and scale. A marginal building is one which has some features which diminish its architectural integrity but which still maintains some redeeming elements such as scale and reversible alterations. A building considered an intrusion is one which has been altered to such degree that its original character is irretrievably obscured and/or its scale and materials are incompatible.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

Historically significant as an economically independent black community, the Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District is the largest such community in the state. The area retains historical associations with black professionals who achieved prominence on state, local, and national levels; black businessmen who owned their own shops; and black craftsmen who constructed many of the buildings in the district. Architecturally, the district is an excellent record of vernacular building types from ca. 1860 through the 1940s. The majority of the buildings were built between 1890 and 1930, reflecting the growth and prosperity of Jackson and the neighborhood during that period. The fact that two buildings are thought to be antebellum is also of paramount importance to the city, which retains only nine other structures believed to predate the Civil War.

Prior to the Civil War, much of the area now located within the historic district belonged to large estates. Because they appear too substantial to have been slave quarters, it is possible that the antebellum structures remaining in the district housed free blacks (twenty-two were listed in an 1860 Jackson city directory), but it is more likely that they were associated in some way with the large estates. Although there was some migration to the larger towns in Mississippi after the Civil War, most of the black population continued to remain in rural areas and occupations. The urban population, however, "possessed an importance out of proportion to its size" (Vernon Lane Wharton, The Negro in Mississippi [New York: Harper and Row, 1965], p. 107. Surveyed and subdivided in the 1870s, the land now located within the historic district became a segregated area for blacks by the 1890s, and by 1904 a local newspaper reported that:

the negroes were never so prosperous as now and more of them are launching business concerns than ever before....They are buying their own homes, thus putting themselves on an independent footing. The established banking institutions are carrying more deposits made by negroes than ever before in the state's history and the assessment rolls show that they are entering all classes of business. "The Negroes Prosperous," Daily Clarion-Ledger [Jackson, Miss.], Sept. 24, 1904, p. 3.

By 1908, one-third of the area of Jackson was owned by black<sup>s</sup>; one-half of the black families owned their own houses, and over one-third of the homes in which blacks lived were owned by blacks (D. W. Woodard, Negro Progress in a Mississippi Town: Being a Study of Conditions in Jackson, Miss. [Cheney, Pa: Committee of 12 for the Advancement of the Interests of the Negro Race, 1908]).

One of the wealthiest black residents of Jackson was Dr. Sidney D. Redmond, whose house within the district still stands at 229 East Church Street. Physician, businessman, and banker, Redmond was president of the American Trust and Savings Bank, one of two black banks established in Jackson by 1904; a stockholder in three banks controlled by whites and in one of the power-and-light companies; chairman of the state Republican executive committee for more than twenty-four years; one of the organizers and first president of the Mississippi Medical and Surgical Association; and a delegate in 1919 to the Pan-African Congress, the stated purpose of which was to improve relations throughout the world.

Other professionals living within the Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District were:

Bank Directors

- ✓ J. A. Martin, 223 East Church Street
- ✓ E. W. Jones, 127 West Oakley Street (building no longer extant)
- E. L. Patton, 237 Fortification Street

Ministers

E. B. Topps, pastor of Mt. Helm Baptist Church from 1889 to 1893, organizer of the Farish Street Baptist Church in 1893, and editor of the Baptist Reporter, at 158 East Cohea Street

W. A. Scott, pastor of the Farish Street Christian Church, at 918 North Farish Street. Scott was also the proprietor of the Progressive Printing Company and built in 1912 the W. A. Scott Building at 705 North Farish Street to house his business. The Scott family later moved to Atlanta, where they started the first black daily newspaper in America, the Atlanta Daily World (The Jackson Advocate, week of Mar. 29-Apr. 4, 1979, sec. A, p. 5).

Educators

O. B. Cobbins, teacher, school principal, and in 1929 supervisor of Negro public schools for Jackson, at 151 East Cohea Street

S. M. Brinkley, principal of Smith Robertson School (first school building erected in Jackson for blacks and attended in the 1920s by noted author Richard Wright), at 523 Bloom Street

Physicians and Dentists

Dr. Beall, one of the first black doctors in Jackson, at 160 West Monument Street, house now located just north of its original site on Mill Street

Dr. L. A. Smith, builder of the first clinic for blacks in Jackson, at 857 North Farish Street

8 - STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

C. L. Barnes, dentist and president of the Jackson Negro Chamber of Commerce, at 920 Farish Street

Carpenters, brickmasons, plasterers, and other craftsmen were well represented in the district, and in 1908 it was reported that "in the plastering trade the negro workmen have no white competitors" (Woodard, p.7). Self-taught contractor George Thomas, now ninety-six years old and still living in the district, is well known for his buildings throughout the city. And Robert Rhodes constructed the stucco Bungalow-style cottages which line Cohea and Blair streets near his own home.

✓ A variety of successful businesses were conducted on Farish Street, termed by the Clarion-Ledger in 1915 "one of the most progressive, growing business streets in the capitol city" (Daily Clarion-Ledger [Jackson, Miss.], Mar. 9, 1915) and known later as the Beale Street of Jackson. Many outstanding brick commercial buildings line the street. Even more important than the individual buildings, however, is the locally unique combination of residential and commercial buildings. This mixture, together with narrow streets, provides an early twentieth-century atmosphere no longer found in other commercial areas of Jackson. Buildings on lower Lamar Street and East Amite Street while not associated with the black history of the area, have been included within the district because they maintain the scale and character of commercial buildings in the district. In addition, buildings here form a buffer from the larger downtown buildings east of Farish Street and visually act as a prelude to the commercial vista which appears when one turns the corner from Amite Street onto Farish Street.

10 - VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION

Beginning at the northwest corner of Amite and Lamar Streets the boundary moves west down the north side of Amite Street to Roach Street where it moves north to West Griffith Street. It then moves west, then south then west and south again to Amite Street, zig-zagging behind buildings on West Griffith and Mill Streets and reaching Mill Street at the northeast corner of Mill and Amite. It then moves north along the east side of Mill Street and jogs to the west to incorporate the large building on the McCarty Holman property. The line then moves east to the center line of Mill Street where it moves north for approximately 100 feet. The line then zig-zags northeast to exclude modern buildings and parking lots on Mill Street. It meets West Monument Street and moves west crossing Mill Street then moves north approximately 300 feet to include buildings facing Mill Street. The boundary then moves west to the railroad right-of-way which it follows in a northerly direction for approximately 350 feet. The boundary then moves east to the east side of Mill Street, then north to Fortification Street until it meets North Farish Street. The boundary is then gerry-mandered to include properties on Blair Street and Fortification Street moving from the rear property limits of Davis Street properties to the front limits of Fortification Street properties. The line then meets Lamar Street approximately 150 feet north of Davis Street. The line proceeds south to the south side of Cohea Street where it moves west to the east side of Blair Street. It moves south along Blair Street excluding a proposed housing project area to the east. The boundary moves east at the southern boundary of the proposed redevelopment area crossing Dreyfus Street where it moves south approximately 50 feet, then east 250 feet, then north 175 feet and east again for another 250 feet where it meets Lamar Street. The boundary then moves south along Lamar Street to Church Street where it follows the north side of Church Street west for about 200 feet. The line then moves south and then west to George Street excluding several modern buildings. The line moves east along George Street to include all buildings on the south side of the street and then moves south and then southeast across High Street to John Hart Street where it excludes a concrete block garage behind Smith Robertson School. It jogs south to meet East Hamilton Street excluding an intrusively altered building on the north side of Hamilton then moves west along the north side of East Hamilton Street for about 200 feet. The line then moves west to the Seale Lily property then south crossing East Griffith and continuing south behind commercial buildings fronting Farish Street. The boundary then moves east to Lamar Street running behind buildings fronting Amite Street. At Lamar Street the line moves south to the beginning point.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District incorporates 700 buildings located in a 125-acre area in downtown Jackson. Arranged on a grid pattern, the narrow streets of the district are bounded on all sides by wider streets. The area is further defined by Greenwood Cemetery on the east, railroad tracks on the west, and the Fortification Street overpass on the north. Farish and Mill streets, the two main north-south arteries, are predominantly commercial in character but become more residential north of Monument Street. Other streets are primarily residential, with small grocery stores dotting the neighborhood. A soybean-processing plant, an ice-cream plant, and a food-storage warehouse are three industries located in the district, which also includes eight churches. Building height is low: the only buildings over two stories are the twelve-story Robert E. Lee Hotel (now an office building) on Lamar Street and the four-story Mississippi Gas Pipeline Building on Griffith Street. Most commercial buildings are constructed of brick and most residences are frame. While the majority of residences date from the early twentieth century, a variety of vernacular building types and periods is represented. Two houses may possibly predate the Civil War. One is a Creole-cottage type with undercut gallery and paneled posts (154 Monument St.) and the other is a five-bay cottage with central entrance (208 E. Cohea St.). Creole cottages ca. 1880 remain on Blair and Cohea streets, and a cluster of Queen Anne-style L-plan cottages with polygonal bays is located on West Church Street. Individual houses of the Queen Anne type are also scattered throughout the district. Shotgun cottages ca. 1903 line one block of Farish and Church streets. Shotgun cottages are enriched with a variety of architectural details, from board-and-batten to bungalow-style porches and exposed rafter-tails. Many are enlarged with a variety of additions and in some cases have become additions themselves. Another common house type is the one-family Bungalow-style cottage found in single-family, duplex, and fourplex forms.

The most striking physical changes to the area include the construction in 1957 of a four-lane road which carves an S-shape through the district, interrupting the grid pattern and separating parts of the community, and the construction in the 1940s and '50s of rental housing in the inner cores of blocks. Although some of this housing is architecturally compatible, some is substandard, and most units are too close together, resulting in a lack of open space. Demolition has occurred in the area around Hamilton and Mill streets, creating new open space and several new buildings, and on West Monument Street, where a new supermarket and parking lots have been built. Only one of the churches has not been replaced by a new building. Two common but reversible alterations are the cladding of frame houses with asbestos and the replacement of original porch posts with metal pipe. Despite these alterations, the percentage of intrusions is at a low twenty percent, and the district maintains a cohesive intimate quality reflective of its early-twentieth-century growth and development.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District incorporates 700 buildings located in a 125-acre area in downtown Jackson. Arranged on a grid pattern, the narrow streets of the district are bounded on all sides by wider streets. The area is further defined by Greenwood Cemetery on the east, railroad tracks on the west, and the Fortification Street overpass on the north. Farish and Mill streets, the two main north-south arteries, are predominantly commercial in character but become more residential north of Monument Street. Other streets are primarily residential, with small grocery stores dotting the neighborhood. A soybean-processing plant, an ice-cream plant, and a food-storage warehouse are three industries located in the district, which also includes eight churches. Building height is low: the only buildings over two stories are the twelve-story Robert E. Lee Hotel (now an office building) on Lamar Street and the four-story Mississippi Gas Pipeline Building on Griffith Street. Most commercial buildings are constructed of brick and most residences are frame. While the majority of residences date from the early twentieth century, a variety of vernacular building types and periods is represented. Two houses may possibly predate the Civil War. One is a Creole-cottage type with undercut gallery and paneled posts (154 Monument St.) and the other is a five-bay cottage with central entrance (208 E. Cohea St.). Creole cottages ca. 1880 remain on Blair and Cohea streets, and a cluster of Queen Anne-style L-plan cottages with polygonal bays is located on West Church Street. Individual houses of the Queen Anne type are also scattered throughout the district. Shotgun cottages ca. 1903 line one block of Farish and Church streets. Shotgun cottages are enriched with a variety of architectural details, from board-and-batten to bungalow-style porches and exposed rafter-tails. Many are enlarged with a variety of additions and in some cases have become additions themselves. Another common house type is the one-family Bungalow-style cottage found in single-family, duplex, and fourplex forms.

The most striking physical changes to the area include the construction in 1957 of a four-lane road which carves an S-shape through the district, interrupting the grid pattern and separating parts of the community, and the construction in the 1940s and '50s of rental housing in the inner cores of blocks. Although some of this housing is architecturally compatible, some is substandard, and most units are too close together, resulting in a lack of open space. Demolition has occurred in the area around Hamilton and Mill streets, creating new open space and several new buildings, and on West Monument Street, where a new supermarket and parking lots have been built. Only one of the churches has not been replaced by a new building. Two common but reversible alterations are the cladding of frame houses with asbestos and the replacement of original porch posts with metal pipe. Despite these alterations, the percentage of intrusions is at a low twenty percent, and the district maintains a cohesive intimate quality reflective of its early-twentieth-century growth and development.

All buildings are considered to contribute to the architectural and/or historical character of the neighborhood unless they are designated as marginal or intrusive. Contributing buildings may be key elements of the streetscape which possess outstanding architectural importance and integrity or may be "part-of-the-scene" buildings without outstanding significance but whose appearance is compatible in terms of materials and scale. A marginal building is one which has some features which diminish its architectural integrity but which still maintains some redeeming elements such as scale and reversible alterations. A building considered an intrusion is one which has been altered to such a degree that its original character is irretrievably obscured and/or its scale and materials are incompatible.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Historically significant as an economically independent black community, the Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District is the largest such community in the state. The area retains historical associations with black professionals who achieved prominence on state, local, and national levels; black businessmen who owned their own shops; and black craftsmen who constructed many of the buildings in the district. Architecturally, the district is an excellent record of vernacular building types from ca. 1860 through the 1940s. The majority of the buildings were built between 1890 and 1930, reflecting the growth and prosperity of Jackson and the neighborhood during that period. The fact that two buildings are thought to be antebellum is also of paramount importance to the city, which retains only nine other structures believed to predate the Civil War.

Prior to the Civil War, much of the area now located within the historic district belonged to large estates. Because they appear too substantial to have been slave quarters, it is possible that the antebellum structures remaining in the district housed free blacks (twenty-two were listed in an 1860 Jackson city directory), but it is more likely that they were associated in some way with the large estates. Although there was some migration to the larger towns in Mississippi after the Civil War, most of the black population continued to remain in rural areas and occupations. The urban population, however, "possessed an importance out of proportion to its size" (Vernon Lane Wharton, The Negro in Mississippi [New York: Harper and Row, 1965], p. 107. Surveyed and subdivided in the 1870s, the land now located within the historic district became a segregated area for blacks by the 1890s, and by 1904 a local newspaper reported that:

the negroes were never so prosperous as now and more of them are launching business concerns than ever before.... They are buying their own homes, thus putting themselves on an independent footing. The established banking institutions are carrying more deposits made by negroes than ever before in the state's history and the assessment rolls show that they are entering all classes of business. "The Negroes Prosperous," Daily Clarion-Ledger [Jackson, Miss.], Sept. 24, 1904, p.3.

By 1908, one-third of the area of Jackson was owned by blacks, one-half of the black families owned their own houses, and over one-third of the homes in which blacks lived were owned by blacks (D. W. Woodard, Negro Progress in a Mississippi Town: Being a Study of Conditions in Jackson, Miss. [Cheney, Pa.: Committee of 12 for the Advancement of the Interests of the Negro Race, 1908]).

One of the wealthiest black residents of Jackson was Dr. Sidney D. Redmond, whose house within the district still stands at 229 East Church Street. Physician, businessman, and banker, Redmond was president of the American Trust and Savings Bank, one of two black banks established in Jackson by 1904; a stockholder in three banks controlled by whites and in one of the power-and-light companies; chairman of the state Republican executive

8 - STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

C. L. Barnes, dentist and president of the Jackson Chamber of Commerce,
at 920 Farish Street

Carpenters, brickmasons, plasterers, and other craftsmen were well represented in the district, and in 1908 it was reported that "in the plastering trade the negro workmen have no white competitors" (Woodard, p.7). Self-taught contractor George Thomas, now ninety-six years old and still living in the district, is well known for his buildings throughout the city. And Robert Rhodes constructed the stucco Bungalow-style cottages which line Cohea and Blair streets near his own home.

A variety of successful businesses were conducted on Farish Street, termed by the Clarion-Ledger in 1915 "one of the most progressive, growing business streets in the capitol city" (Daily Clarion-Ledger [Jackson, Miss.], Mar. 9, 1915) and known later as the Beale Street of Jackson. Many outstanding brick commercial buildings line the street. Even more important than the individual buildings, however, is the locally unique combination of residential and commercial buildings. This mixture, together with narrow streets, provides an early twentieth-century atmosphere no longer found in other commercial areas of Jackson.

Beginning at the northwest corner of Amite and Lamar Streets the boundary moves west down the center of Amite Street to Mill Street. It then moves north along the <sup>east side</sup> center of Mill Street and jogs to the west to incorporate the large building on the McCarty Holman property. The line then moves east to the center line of Mill Street where it moves north for approximately 100 feet. District of simple late 19th/early 20th century brick commercial buildings + frame houses associated with black community development in Jackson between 1880s + depression. District would, ideally, include the delineation of eligibility area, altho that is not politically feasible. SE boundary is a problem.

HISTORIAN

Two - vacant area and tenuously related 12 story hotel/office bldg + bus station - these appear to belong to downtown commercial area. Questions related to probable associative values also need to be cleared up; categories of bldgs need clarification.

AGREE WITH HISTORIAN COMMENTS ABOVE BUT ALSO AM CONCERNED THAT BOUNDARIES ARE JUSTIFIED IN TERMS OF HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION AS EXPRESSED IN SECTION 8. IT MAY BE POSSIBLE TO INCLUDE THE NORTH SIDE OF AMITE, EAST OF FARSH AND UP TO THE ROBERT E. LEE IN LAMAR. IF A CASE CAN BE MADE FOR A HISTORICAL RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THESE BUILDINGS (THROUGH OWNERSHIP OR USE) AND THOSE WITH ESTABLISHED BLACK ASSOCIATIONS IN THE REST OF THE DISTRICT. ANOTHER OPTION MIGHT BE TO ELABORATE ON THE ARCHITECTURAL COHESIVENESS AND SENSE OF TIME + PLACE IN THE DISTRICT AS OPPOSED TO THE HIGH DEGREE OF NEW BUILDING OUTSIDE THE DISTRICT.

Description: Please provide a definition of the contributing, marginal, and intrusive categories of structures within the district.

Statement of Significance: The general assessment of historical significance for the district is well done. In terms of the specific associations with individuals cited on page 8/59, however, some of the street addresses given do not appear to relate to properties listed in the inventory. Please check these and, if necessary, revise the text. As the National Register staff has discussed with the MS staff, the statement of architectural significance in #8 should also be expanded.

Dear Carol,

Think all the requested corrections have been made. We decided to leave out the Robert E. Lee Office Building.

These first pages are the originals which we retyped. Other pages (59, 60) have had corrections made without retyping.

Please give me a call when the ~~manuscript~~ <sup>district</sup> is officially approved and listed.

I got the job in Cincinnati and will start there March 17.

Dear Mr. Herrington:

In reply to your letter (#663) concerning the Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District, we, the representatives of the Homeowners and Residents of this neighborhood, would like it to go on record that we want this to become listed with the National Register as an Historic District. It is our firm opinion and belief, backed by professional opinions and data, that this is one of the most historically and culturally significant areas in the state of Mississippi. Add to that its varied and outstanding architectural designs in building styles and one becomes aware of the tremendous input and influence on the growth of our city and our state and nation that this area has contributed.

The Farish Street Neighborhood has been and still is the birthplace of a number of significant individuals and families who have contributed greatly to the progress of the City of Jackson. There is a very unique cultural heritage in this neighborhood for Blacks in the fact that these outstanding architectural structures were built and originally owned by Black People! These structures are physical reminders of the labor of Blacks toward economic dignity and community development. They are also a positive statement about Black Life in the South during Reconstruction which paralleled the degrading effects of slavery and the insensitivity shown towards our great potential as a developing people.

YES! We want our neighborhood listed as an Historic District as a testimonial to our heritage and as a small measure of our potential which has too often been ignored, hindered from actualization (except to the advantage of others, not to us!), and even outright denial of any attempt by us to explore that potential for our own benefit as a community of developing people. Farish Street Neighborhood stands in tribute to the fact that hinderance was not always and never will be the final word in our development with this nation!

Re: Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District

Dear Sir:

My clients, Seymour and Ida Lee Schwartz, are the present owners of the above described property. Said property consists of several duplexes and houses which are located in one of the lower income area's of the city of Jackson. These residential apartments are fully occupied and produce rental income for my clients.

However, it is the belief of my clients that the aforesaid enjoyment would cease upon the listing of the above described property on the National Register. For when considering the constant repairs which are required and the excess amount which must be spent on those repairs to keep within the strict rehabilitation requirements setforth by the Department of Interior, the placement of the above on the National Register would cause a severe economic loss to said clients. For, the rent charged each tenant would have to be so substantially increased that such a price would far exceed the rent charged in a similar neighborhood. Consequently, my clients would be faced with almost total vacancy.

It is for the above reasons that Seymour and Ida Lee Schwartz desire that their property be removed from the Department's consideration on the National Register's List.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Delaporte:

Our client, the Jackson Redevelopment Authority, has requested that we formally comment to you concerning the proposed designation of a "Farish Street Historical District" in the City of Jackson, Mississippi. It is our understanding that you have requested formal comments by October 26, 1979. We hereby request a formal extension of that deadline in order to prepare information which we believe that you will find pertinent to this matter.

The Jackson Redevelopment Authority is also deeply concerned about the proposed designation of several blocks surrounding the King Edward Hotel in downtown Jackson as a historical district, and we would appreciate your advising us as to the time for filing formal statements concerning such designation.

Your assistance is appreciated.

Dear Mr herrington,

In reply to your letter (#663) concerning the Farish street Neighborhood Historic District, I would like to have it on record that I am in favor of my home being a part of an Historic district.

In the overall view point of our neighborhood in general, it is my opinion that no other area in the state of Mississippi could be more important than the Farish street neighborhood. Our neighborhood is the birth place of a number of significant families and individuals who have contributed much to the growth of the city of Jackson.

Dear Mr, Herrington..

In reply to your letter (#563) concerning the Fa ish Street Neighborhood Historic District, I would like to have it on record that I am in favor of my home being a part of an Historic district.

In the overall viewpoint of our neighborhood in general, it is my opinion that no other area in the state of Mississippi could be more important than the Farish street neighborhood. Our neighborhood is the birth place of a number of significant families and individuals who have contributed much to the growth of the city of Jackson.

Yes we want our neighborhood listed as an Historic District.

REPORT: The nominated Fourth St. A.D. + proposed project area in Jackson were presented:

1. Summary of chronology
2. Status of district
3. " project area

Nomination circulated, copy of State report on area done last year. Various issues were discussed — general question of eligibility of bungalow neighborhoods; level of "architectural" significance here + whether many of the blys were in fact

Examples of styles or by types; level of integrity, general period of buildings - really nineties to 30's - most of the fabric; question of how to handle post 1940's frame houses. Can't small, read statement of significance

Consensus:

= Project area eligible as part of eligible district

= Boundaries of district may be revised.

jury left us w/ specific series of questions to answer in nomination review:

✓ 1) probable associative values - which structures within the district

✓ 2) concentrations of by by period - concentrations of intrusions; areas of integrity → definition of intrusions

✓ strong 3) assess community support, etc.

4) review in context of landmark
Black districts.

Dear Mr. Stennis:

Thank you for your inquiry of October 25, 1979, concerning the nomination of the Parish Street Neighborhood Historic District, Hinds County, Mississippi, to the National Register of Historic Places. At your request, the commenting period for this nomination has been extended until December 1, 1979.

The area surrounding the King Edward Hotel is included within the West Capitol Street Historic District. This nomination was received at the National Register on October 30, 1979, and we are currently preparing to notify property owners of the pending nomination. Property owners will be given 30 days to present written comments prior to professional review of the nomination at the National Register. We would be pleased to receive your statements concerning the nomination during the commenting period.

We appreciate your interest in these nominations.

Dear Mr. Schwartz:

Thank you for your letter of October 23, 1979, concerning the proposed listing of the Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District, Hinds County, Mississippi, in the National Register of Historic Places.

The National Register will consider your comments during the review process and will provide a copy of your letter to the Mississippi State Historic Preservation Officer, Mr. Elbert Hilliard, Director, State of Mississippi, Department of Archives and History, P.O. Box 571, Jackson, Mississippi 39205. Although National Register regulations require that a property owner be given an opportunity to comment on a proposed nomination, an owner's permission is not required for listing.

11/2/79

Listing in the National Register is Federal recognition that a property possesses cultural value and is worthy of preservation. Once listed in the National Register, a property receives limited protection through comment by the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation on the effect of federally assisted projects on historic properties. Provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 provide incentives for the rehabilitation of certain structures listed in the National Register and disincentives for their demolition. Listing has no other effect on the property. It does not affect the range of actions an owner can take as long as a Federal action is not involved.

If the Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District is accepted for listing in the National Register, notice will be placed in the "Federal Register." If additional information is needed to complete the evaluation, or if it is determined that the property does not meet the National Register criteria for evaluation, the nomination will be returned to the State.

We appreciate your participation in the National Register commenting process.

RE: Your reference #661

Dear Mr. Delaporte:

As we indicated in our letter of October 25, 1979, our client, the Jackson Redevelopment Authority, has requested that we formally comment to you concerning the proposed designation of a "Farish Street Neighborhood Historic District" in the City of Jackson. As the application for the proposed District indicates, the proposed District includes in excess of 700 structures occupying over 125 acres and encompasses a major portion of downtown Jackson. While it appears from the application that certain structures, or combinations of structures, included within the proposed District are of historical importance, a substantial portion of the structures included in the proposed District are less than 50 years old, have been moved from their original sites or have been renovated in a manner inconsistent with their original design. More importantly, a large percentage of the structures in the proposed District are substandard and a large part of the proposed District is a slum or blighted area.

On May 15, 1979, the City Council of the City of Jackson, after a public hearing on the matter, determined two areas in downtown Jackson to be slum areas or blighted areas or combinations thereof. The proposed District includes the major portion of the property included in one of those areas together with a small amount of property which had previously been declared to be a slum or blighted area. The proposed designation of this slum or blighted area as worthy of preservation is troubling. The City Council's designation was not undertaken lightly. At the public hearing comments were received from representatives of resident homeowners, tenants residing in the area, individuals

DEC 3 1979

Mr. Chris Therral Delaporte
November 30, 1979

operating businesses in the area, absentee landlords and persons interested in commercial developments in the area. At the close of the hearing the mayor specifically asked if anyone present opposed the designation of the area as slum or blighted, and no objections were voiced.

Even if a building or an area has historical significance, it may have deteriorated to a condition in which it is not worthy of preservation. The information presented in the application does not, however, take the decadent state of many of the structures within the proposed District, or the blighted condition of much of the proposed District, into consideration. Certainly the effect of the proposed District as "slum preservation" is not desirable.

Additionally, the items of historical significance referenced in the application, while possibly justifying the designation of specific areas within the proposed District as historic districts or the designation of specific buildings as historic structures, do not justify designating the entire proposed District as a historic district. Clearly, the inclusion of hundreds of buildings of absolutely no historical significance within such a district is not justified.

36 C.F.R. §60.2 provides in part that "the National Register is . . . to be used . . . to indicate what properties should be considered for protection from destruction or impairment." In determining what structures should be considered for protection, the practical effect of designating an area as a historical district should be considered. While 36 C.F.R. §60.2 provides in part that the "National Register was designed to be and is administered as a planning tool without restraint upon private property interests," the effects of Internal Revenue Code provisions applicable to historic districts cannot be ignored. It is very likely that, in the event that the entire proposed District is declared to be a historical district, the present blighted conditions will be exacerbated by the actions of property owners who, to avoid the complications involved in altering or replacing substandard structures, will allow their properties to continue to decay. Moreover, it is inevitable that any revitalization of areas included in the proposed District will require the use of public funds to remove substandard structures, and we have been informed by the Mississippi Department of Archives and History that a minimum one-year delay will be incurred if any demolition activities are considered. Thus, the designation of the entire proposed District as a historic district is most likely to result in the continued decline of the area and the continued decay of any historic structures in the area.

Mr. Chris Therral Delaporte
Page Three

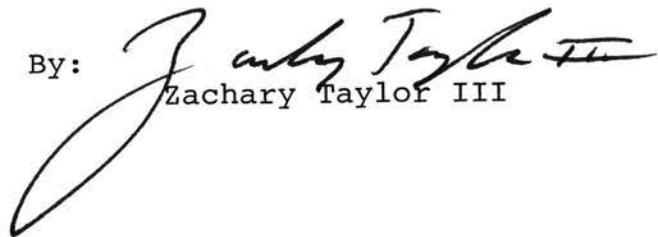

On the other hand, the designation of a compact area as a historic district or individual buildings as historic structures will facilitate the channeling of available funds into endeavors which will result in preservation of buildings and areas of historic significance and in general community improvement. It is vitally important, therefore, that specific areas or buildings be considered separately, so that the purposes of historical preservation and revitalization of blighted areas may be fulfilled.

For the foregoing reasons, we respectfully suggest that the application in its present form be rejected.

Sincerely,

WATKINS PYLE LUDLAM WINTER & STENNIS

Bob + I discussed the changes to the nomenclature and the status of notification procedures. I explained Lee's recent thoughts on <sup>possibly</sup> need for notification in cases of substantial changes to nomenclature or where nom. was resubmitted after long delay.

Bob said he felt that notification was not necessary. District had been reduced; nomenclature was not "substantially revised" in his opinion. If this constituted a major revision, then State + <sup>program</sup> would be in trouble! — lots of other noms. with similar changes have been listed.

States procedures had been followed properly. He would prefer not to have to bring this before the review board again; this would cause confusion + be counter-productive. Besides, State has a discretionary grant

Dear Mr. Herrington:

We are pleased to enclose, herewith, the necessary nomination forms, map, and photographs for the Farish Street Neighborhood Historic Proposed Amendment Area, Hinds County, Mississippi.

The Farish Street Area was approved for nomination by the Mississippi Historic Preservation Professional Review Board at its meeting on May 22, 1980. The area is located in the Fourth Congressional District of Congressman Jon Hinson.

We trust that you will find the enclosed forms in order and will let us hear from you at your convenience.

Sincerely,

Elbert R. Hilliard
