DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

In outward appearance, the City Hall is very little changed from its original state. Interiors have been altered through the years to provide space for various offices and modern renovations.

The structure is constructed of fired red brick; presumably upon stone foundations. Joists for floors and ceilings are of wood as is the exterior trim. The building is two storied with a basement. Total square footage of the interior, including the basement space, is 13,900 square feet. In plan, as involume, the building presents a long rectangular mass with the narrow facade fronting the street.

On the ground floor is housed fire fighting equipment. The City Hall was constructed to serve the community as office space and as a fire station. Three round headed arches enclose recessed doors and form the ground floor fenestration at the street. The central doorway is larger than the other two doors which flank either side of it; thus providing access for the fire fighting equipment.

Separating the second story fenestration from that of the ground floor is an entablature utilizing brackets, dental range and a frieze. Above this horizontal element are the four second story windows, double-hung with two panes each. Segmented surrounds ending in brackets enclose each window. Another entablature/frieze similar to the one described above separates the second floor fenestration from the ornamental roof pediment. This same frieze projects out from the building's plane and turns the corners to form a cornice detail.

The roof pediment is a Victorian adaptation of a Renaissance design. It is a stepped affair and is not triangular, strictly speaking; although it rises to a pointed apex. Four closed urns top the structure. All trim is done in white.

Fenestration on the sides and in the back of the building is held to an absolute minimum. Probably, the building abutted or was in very close proximity to adjacent structures. Today, it stands alone except for much smaller and lower structures (a jail and a shed) which are attached to it.

The overall style is done in the Victorian idiom as it was simplified and adapted to the western territorial scene. Detailing involves borrowings from several of the Renaissance modes.

S

The building is apparently well maintained and is structurally sound.

The Tombstone City Hall is a "core" element within a designated National Historic Landmark, Tombstone. Architecturally, it has only two other rivals approaching its size and quality in the town; the restored Scheffelin Hall and the Tombstone Courthouse. The size of these three buildings makes them imposing elements among the smaller structures.

The City Hall was designed by a local architect, Frank Walker, and built by a local contractor, William M. Constable. A contemporary issue of the Tombstone Epitaph noted the cost of the new governmental building as being $10,000 and welcomed the addition to the Tombstone skyline. The actual costs exceeded the Epitaph's report and amounted to $11,490. Completion of the building was scheduled for January 23, 1883; although it is generally believed that the City Hall was completed near the end of 1882.

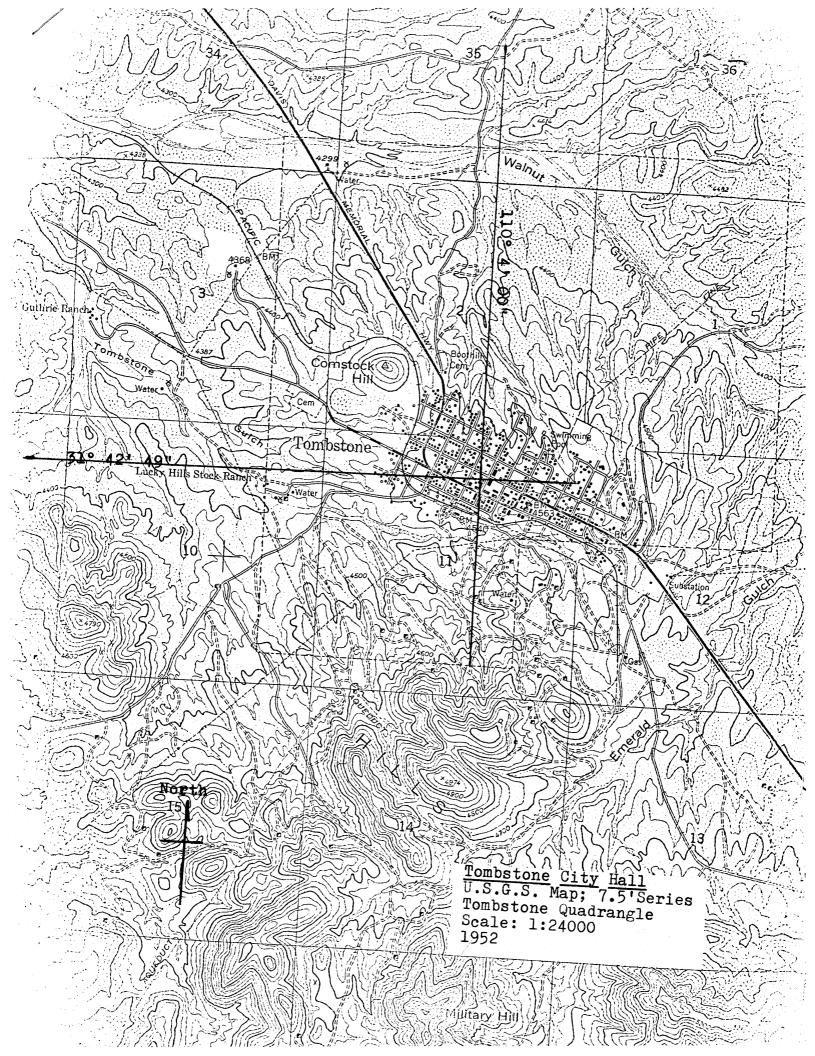

The City Hall is an important architectural element of the Tombstone scene and is still continuing its original function for that community.
