DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The district includes Hedekin parade field, these buildings and their immediate surrounding areas: Bldgs No. (on the following page) The overall general appearance has changed very little since they were built other than the addition of other buildings and the paving of roads. The buildings are situated in a quadrangle around Hedekin field located in the northeast corner of Fort McPherson. All of these buildings remain in their original unaltered state of red brick with white wood trim. Many different types of trees border Hedekin field mostly of which are oak. This adds greatly to the overall scenery and beauty of the area. Most of the buildings have a gable roof with wood decking with hand-seamed metal roofing. A few such as Quarters 5 and 10 have circular walls with dome-type roofs. The majority have the common bond brick pattern and many arched windows. The columns found throughout the district are of the simple Victorian architecture with doric design.

Almost all along staff row (Bldgs 1-20) and more specifically Quarters 5 and 10 have intricate brick work on the chimneys and trim. Classical details are also found in the roof trim with dentilled entablatures.

Quarters 10, indeed the most impressive building of the district, is in basically the Queen Anne style of Victorian Architecture yet it also has elements of the classical style. It has a rambling plan with several turrets with small-paned windows of the earlier Victorian era.

Fort McPherson, one of the most picturesque installations in the south, has been rich in military tradition since its inception in 1889. It has long been an important military post, showplace and point of interest to Atlanta citizens and visitors.

Many of the buildings survive in the northeast corner of the property in the original quadrangle effect. These red brick structures with white wood trim are all substantial examples of the High Victorian style of architecture. Some are quite fine individually, especially building No. 10, the FORSCOM Commander's residence, but together they constitute a historic district which is quite identifiably original old Fort McPherson.

S E Together with the wide parade field, which was used for polo matches in the early 1900's, and rows of shade trees these High Victorian structures constitute a good example of a later 19th century military post. These buildings are indeed impressive because throughout Atlanta, so much of the High Victorian architecture has disappeared.

Fort McPherson, named for General James Birdseye McPherson who was killed in the battle of Atlanta, has had a variety of missions throughout the years since its troop garrison because of its geographic location and warm climate. and continued as such throughout World War II. Its hospital served as a General Hospital both during the Spanish-American War and World War I. It is distinguished itself as a very fine convalescent both during and after each war.

World War I brought great activitiy to Fort McPherson as an induction center during the war and separation center after the war. It was estimated to have processed close to 200,000 men during this time. Afterwards, Third Army Headquarters moved to Fort McPherson and has remained until July 1973 when it was deactivated and replaced by Forces Command, which has the responsibility of all active and ready U.S. Army Forces throughout the Continental United States.
