DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Exterior: Magnolia is a two-story frame house constructed in 1853 by the Bennettsville lawyer, William Dalrymple Johnson. A one-story piazza extends along the northern exposure and front portion of the eastern side. Originally only a simple gabled porch framed the back entrance. Piazza is enclosed by carved wooden ballustrade and shed roof supported by ten Doric columns standing on brick pillars just outside the piazza floor. Matching double leaf, five-paneled doors are at the front and rear entrances, framed by rectangular transoms and sidelights with unusual rectangular pane design. Windows are double hung sash, nine over nine lights with louvred shutters on the western, lower northern (front), and upper eastern sides. Boxed cornices are bracketed all around.

Interior: Basic floor plan is four rooms over four with large central hallways on each floor. Floors throughout are of five-inch heart pine planks. Hand carved cornice, door, and window mouldings are noteworthy throughout the house, with the most elaborate in the first floor central hallway and living room. Open-well, two-flight stairway has scrolled carvings beneath each step and garland carvings beneath the landing and second floor. Transom of rear entrance located just above stairway landing. Eight hand carved mantels are in the home: one arched opening mantel of white Carrara marble and seven rectangular opening wooden mantels, two of which display a carved feather design on the pilasters.

Surroundings: Magnolia is located on a one-acre site which was formerly the Bennettsville muster field. There are twin towering magnolias in the front which were planted by the builder and give the house its name. Behind the house are a barn and the old slave quarters, built in 1853, both of which are in excellent condition.

Alterations and minor additions have been made to the house to provide a utility porch in the rear, breakfast room, and additional bathrooms.
