DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

In 1887 Charles Phillip Ingalls built a two-story frame home in De Smet, Dakota Territory. The house is comprised of two offset rectangles with asphalt shingled roofs running perpendicular to one another. A lean-to is attached to the rear (north wall) of the home and was used as a coal shed. A single stack of bricks comprises the center straddle ridge chimney. Fenestration consists of double sash windows, which appear singly or in sets of two. Two doors, one on each story of the north wall, are unusual because no steps are built up to either of them presently. Although the house has no concrete foundation, it is in good shape.

The Ingalls home rests upon lot 12, block 10 in Brown's Addition at 210 West Third Street in De Smet, South Dakota. While the Ingalls family lived in the house, a barn and sand-point pump were in constant use. The backyard was covered with fruit trees and vegetables were planted in the adjoining lot. Now large poplar trees provide shade for the house in the Little Town on the Prairie.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Ingalls arrived in De Smet in 1879. Mr. Ingalls was employed as a timekeeper for the railroad which was then being built. Previous attempts at homesteading and farming in both Wisconson and Kansas met with failure. The opportunity to work in Dakota was received by the family as one of good fortune. Their first year in De Smet was the subject of Laura Wilder's By the Shores of Silver Lake. The Long Winter and Little Town on the Prairie followed, tracing the family's lives between the years 1880-1882.

In 1885 Laura was married to Almonze Wilder and moved to a nearby homestead. Her father and mother moved permanently to De Smet where they lived in a number of places, some of them built and owned by "Pa" who gave up farming to become a professional carpenter. In 1887 he built a story and a half frame house in De Smet. His daughter Laura Ingalls Wilder moved to Missouri in 1894 but the house is mentioned by her and her daughter Rose in their books about Dakota life.

Charles Ingalls became an active member of the community. He served at various times as town clerk, Justice of the Peace, and deputy sheriff. At his death in 1902 he was mourned as one of the town's earliest pioneers.

The significance of Charles Ingall's house lies in the fact that the real hero of a series of children's books about pioneer life lived there. In addition to "Pa" Ingalls, the house in De Smet was also the last home of Laura's mother and her sister Mary, whose blindness gave her a special part in the stories. Many descriptions of the prairies, the towns and the people in Laura's works are given through her personal descriptions to Mary. In a way, the house Pa Ingalls built is the sequil to all the "Little" books. It tells the final story of the Ingalls family in their struggle to create a decent way of life in The Little Town on the Prairie.

For De Smet, the house is a significant land mark associated with the Ingalls family whose history is also a record of the towns development.
