ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE (describe important architectural features and evaluate in terms of other buildings within community)

This is Stoneham's only intact example of a Downingsque Gothic Revival cottage. Constructed c. 1850 when the Greek Revival style prevailed in Stoneham, it is a T-plan cottage with a cross-gable frontispiece and an extended rear ell. It is sheathed in clapboards with narrow corner-boards, and enclosed by an overhanging, steep pitched roof with exposed rafters. "Gothic" embellishments consist of pierced vergeboards in the cross gable and pointed windows at the second story. First story windows have unusually heavy lintels and contain 6/6 sash. The entry is enclosed by a glazed porch. The house faces north on Marble Street in a mixed 19th and 20th century residential neighborhood.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE (explain the role owners played in local or state history and how the building relates to the development of the community)

114 Marble Street possesses integrity of location, design, materials and workmanship and is significant as Stoneham's only well preserved example of a Gothic Revival cottage. It meets criterion C of the National Register of Historic Places.

114 Marble Street is the best preserved Gothic cottage in Stoneham. A few residences were built in the style given impetus by A.J. Downing, but many of the original details are lost. This residence retains the pointed arch windows, shaped shutters, exposed rafters, and vergeboard decor of the original. A small front porch, primarily glazed, has been added.
