Summary Paragraph

The Cornwallville Cemetery occupies a prominent position in Cornwallville, an unincorporated rural hamlet located in the Town of Durham, Greene County, New York. The nominated cemetery consists of a rectangular-shaped parcel of land, defined on its perimeter by sections of stone wall and cast-iron fencing, within which are rows of graves aligned on a northeast-to-southwest axis so as to follow the orientation of the cemetery's two longer sides. The small hamlet of Cornwallville and the distant raised landforms of the Catskill Mountains serve as the general setting for this historic burial yard, which received its first identified interment in 1824. The cemetery at one time served as the setting for a Methodist meetinghouse, which, after falling into disuse, was removed from the site and relocated to the Farmers' Museum in Cooperstown, New York; the majority of the graves are associated with individuals at one time affiliated with this religious organization, some of whom moved away but whose remains were returned to Cornwallville for interment. Individual and family grave sites are marked by characteristic and generally modest examples of nineteenth and twentieth century funerary art, ranging in scope from simple tablet-type stone markers with simple carved inscriptions to those of slightly more advanced conception, among them examples of the obelisk type and related variants, which became common in the mid-nineteenth century. The nominated cemetery serves as the final resting place for many important families and members of the historic Cornwallville community; among them is Capt. Daniel Cornwall, a veteran of the American Revolution and Connecticut native who first settled there in 1788 and from whom the hamlet took its name.

Narrative Description

Location & Setting

The Cornwallville Cemetery is located adjacent to Greene County Route 20 in the rural hamlet of Cornwallville, Town of Durham, Greene County, New York. The nominated cemetery consists of a rectangular-shaped parcel oriented with its longer sides facing to the southeast and northwest; it is entered from its northeast side, which fronts on Route 20, where space is located for vehicular parking. The cemetery consists of a relatively flat but gently undulating expanse of land which is bisected by rows of graves aligned on a northeast-to-southwest axis, following the orientation of the two longer sides of the parcel. Most of the perimeter is lined with a dry-laid stone wall, laid up in roughly coursed rubble and terminated by flat copping stones, in addition to a section of decorative cast-iron fencing with double-leaf gates fronting on the Route 20 side. The entrance gates correspond with a central aisle that bisects the cemetery and leads southwards towards a 1926 receiving vault situated along the rear wall. Cornwallville, a small rural hamlet situated in the Catskill Mountain foothills that retains a number of nineteenth century dwellings with vernacular characteristics, serves as the general setting for the cemetery, which is punctuated by a small number of mature deciduous trees, similar to those which frame it on the northwest and southwest sides. The larger view shed to the south consists of the raised landforms of the Catskill Mountains, which rise prominently in the distance. Included within the bounds of the cemetery at one time was a wood-frame meetinghouse that served the community's Methodists. After it fell into disuse, it was moved to a museum village in the early 1960s. The cemetery's earliest recorded interment dates to 1824 and, while it continues in active use, most of the available space for burials has already been used.

Cemetery (contributing site): Funerary Art Overview

The collection of funerary art contained within the Cornwallville Cemetery is, in general terms, modest in scale, conception, and execution. The earliest stones date from the 1820s and reflect prevailing period tastes in gravestone art; these are of the simple tablet type with either flat, rounded or segmental-arched heads, and were typically crafted from marble. These stones have simple carved inscriptions and generally lack pronounced iconography, which in this period would have consisted of characteristic motifs such as urns, willow trees and carved fans, these having been drawn from Neoclassical sources. Information such as names and birth and death dates are carved into the stone surface or otherwise appear in raised letters against a recessed background. This general type continued to be used into the middle and later decades of the nineteenth century, though by this time the tablet was often set on a single or multi-part base, the outer edge of the tablet often being chamfered or otherwise embellished with carved detail.

Conspicuous within the cemetery are a number of stones of the obelisk type, which were common in the mid-nineteenth century, and also those which rise from a multi-part base and are terminated by an urn motif. Variants of the latter type include those which are terminated by a spherical motif and one which is surmounted by a carved statuette. These represent the most elaborated of the representative nineteenth century stones.

The cemetery contains one example of a sand-cast zinc marker, a type produced by the Monumental Bronze Company of Bridgeport, Connecticut from 1874 to 1914 and touted at that time by the manufacturer as “white bronze.” Resting on a low stone base, it consists of two distinctive sections, both cast with features meant to impart cut stone, these sections being hollow and bolted together. A number of polished granite stones, some of which date to the early twentieth century, are also present within the cemetery. These typically feature simplified, carved Neo-Grec foliate detailing and are conspicuous by virtue of their polished sheen.

Fence (contributing structure)

Perimeter fencing, consisting of both stone and cast-iron sections, helps to define the cemetery’s boundary; most all of the cemetery—excepting the northeast side, which is aligned with a cast-iron fence—is bordered by a stone wall. This wall was laid up dry with rubble stone in rough courses and is terminated by flat copping stones. On the southeast side it is particularly prominent and there it rises to breast height.

Receiving Vault, 1926 (contributing building)

The receiving vault is located against the rear wall of the cemetery parcel. This building has load-bearing walls of cast-stone ashlar and was erected above a rectangular plan; it has a gable roof which is concealed on its principal, north-facing elevation by a squared parapet. The cast-stone blocks, which have faux rough-hewn faces, were laid up in regular courses in cement mortar and finished with lime grapevine joints. Centered on the principal elevation are paired metal doors hung on exterior-mounted hinges. Centered above this door is a memorial plaque with incised lettering which reads “ERECTED IN MEMORY OF WILLIAM JOHNSON 1926.”

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph

The Cornwallville Cemetery is a site of considerable importance to the historic identity of this rural Greene County, New York community, which sprang up in the hilly terrain of the Town of Durham in the shadow of the Catskill Mountains in the later eighteenth century. First used for burials in 1824, the cemetery serves as the final resting place for many of this community's preeminent figures, among them the hamlet's first settler, Captain Daniel Cornwall, a veteran of the American Revolution who arrived there from Connecticut with his family in 1788 and established a pioneer homestead. The Cornwallville cemetery long served as the setting for a Methodist house of worship, a wood-frame building which served an organization that had been established in the community a few years earlier, in 1821. Long a central religious and social institution for many of the hamlet's denizens, the church fell into disuse and was later relocated to the Farmers' Museum in Cooperstown, New York, where it remains as part of the organization's historic building collection. The nominated cemetery, while it enjoys significance in relation to the collection of funerary art maintained there, nevertheless derives its principal significance from its direct association with the early settlement history of the hamlet of Cornwallville; the various individuals and their families who are interred there collectively helped guide the development of Cornwallville, as well as influencing its social, civic and religious affairs, from the time of its settlement beginning in the later eighteenth century. The Cornwallville Cemetery is being nominated in association with National Register of Historic Places Criterion A, in the area of Exploration/Settlement, given the considerable number of prominent settlement period individuals that are interred there. It is additionally being nominated in association with Criterion C, in the area of Art, for the representative collection of funerary art contained within. It remains a significant and salient touchstone to the hamlet of Cornwallville's history and the various individuals and families which shaped it.

Narrative Statement of Significance

Historical Context

In her 1927 history of Greene County, Jessie Van Vechten Vedder described the hamlet of Cornwallville as "one of those 'below the mountain villages,' set among the hills and farm lands of 'Durham Town'..."<sup>1</sup> Durham, the township within which the hamlet is located, was at one time part of the District of Coxsackie, Albany County, this tax district having been established in 1772. Coxsackie was subsequently formed into a town, a portion of which was partitioned off in 1788 to create the new towns of Coxsackie and Freehold. Greene County was formally organized in 1800, with Freehold among its towns at the time of formation; following the partitioning off of the towns of Cairo and Greenville, in 1803, the name Durham was adopted for the remaining territory, a portion of which was later annexed to Schoharie County.<sup>2</sup> Immigration into the town, which during the 1770s largely remained an unbroken wilderness bounded on the south by the Catskill Mountains, was largely effected immediately after the hostilities of the American Revolution had ceased, excepting those first pioneer footholds established prior to the war. The earliest settlements within the Town of Durham were made at Oak Hill—at that time known by the name DeWittsburgh, and probably established in the early 1770s—and on Meetinghouse Hill, which until 1805 continued to be known by the name New Durham.<sup>3</sup> Among these first Greene County pioneers was Hendrick Plank, who settled in what is today the hamlet of Oak Hill during the 1770s; he was taken prisoner by Native Americans during the war and conveyed to Canada, never to return. Settlement of this region was largely made by Connecticut natives, who adopted the name Durham in recognition of the community they left behind, though they were joined by others, among them Dutch families from previously settled parts of the Hudson Valley.

Cornwallville—"Cornwallsville" or "Cornwalls Ville" variously—was first settled, as its name would imply, by Capt. Daniel Cornwall, a Connecticut native and Revolutionary War veteran who arrived at that locale in 1788. Cornwall was soon joined by others, and by their efforts a small crossroads community sprang up. In 1821 a Methodist Episcopal Church was established in the hamlet; the details of its creation were conveyed by William S. Borthwick in a centennial history of the organization:

Many of the settlers of New Durham... belonged to the Congregational Church of Connecticut, and among the first things they did was to build a log meetinghouse and to provide for regular meetings on the Sabbath... Quite a number of the settlers about New Durham were Methodists, and they bought the church frame of the East Durham people and set it up on the hill near the Presbyterian Meeting House... As the forests were cleared away, Meeting House Hill became very bleak and bare, and a majority of its members lived in Cornwallville, hence in 1821 they moved the church building there... The land on which this church is built included part of the present Cemetery here, which has been used as such since about 1825.<sup>4</sup>

The Methodist church was a central institution in the lives of many Cornwallville residents, and prior to being removed to the Farmers' Museum in Cooperstown, New York, the meetinghouse which served its congregation was located within the bounds of the cemetery, which developed around it. Many of those interred within the cemetery were affiliated with this church and came to rest in its shadow. The building was identified by the museum in 1961, following what was termed a 15-year search for a suitable religious building to round out that aspect of the museum's interpretative collection; this came the year after the congregation merged with other local Methodist congregations to form the new Susquehanna Methodist Church, its house of worship located at Durham.<sup>5</sup>

The physical complexion of the hamlet of Cornwallville, as it appeared in the immediate post-Civil War period, is depicted on the 1867 map included in the F.W. Beers atlas of Greene County. It was largely residential in nature, with houses aligned along both sides of the principal thoroughfare. The community sustained only the most basic services, among them a blacksmith shop, wagon shop, coopers shop, and a store and post office, which served both the needs of its residents and those of the outlying farm area. There was additionally a district school house—District School No. 4—in addition to the Methodist church.

Biographical Accounts

The following section provides brief biographical accounts of some of the Cornwallville families and prominent individuals whose remains repose in the nominated burial ground. A complete inventory of the individuals interred there between 1824 and 1993 is included as an appendix to this nomination. A 1915 image depicting a picnic of Cornwallville residents is also included in the back matter of this nomination; most all of the individuals who are depicted in that now century-old image had their remains laid to rest in the Cornwallville Cemetery.

Moses Austin (1768-1848); early settler, Court of Common Pleas judge, New York State Senator

Moses Austin was a native of Wallingford, Connecticut; he came to the Town of Durham in 1789 and to Cornwallville in 1806. As noted in J.B. Beers's 1884 History of Greene County, "[Austin] was a good business man, and became very wealthy. He was a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and in 1819, he was elected to the Senate of this State, holding his office four years. Ten years later he was elected to the Assembly. He spent the evening of his life in Cairo, and died there in 1848.”<sup>6</sup> His grave is marked by an obelisk-form stone crafted from marble.

Capt. Daniel Cornwall (ca. 1758-1843); Revolutionary War veteran, Greene County pioneer, hamlet founder
In Beers’s history the following was written of Cornwall: “[He]” came from Connecticut; built first house in Cornwallsville; at an early date was called Captain Daniel.”<sup>7</sup> In Vedder’s 1927 county history, the following was conveyed: “He was born in Connecticut about 1753, married Rachel Hall, and settled on a farm owned by Benjamin Hubbard in 1788. His first house was of logs. The pair were two weeks coming from New Haven, Conn., to Catskill in a sailing vessel. A defective title to his land caused him to pay twice for it.”<sup>8</sup> A veteran of the American Revolution, he was a Congregationalist by faith and a highly respected member of the community; as noted by Vedder “In his old age he was often Moderator at the annual town meetings.” Cornwall’s grave marker is of a simple tablet type, with no artistic embellishment and a simply carved inscription.

Calvin Borthwick (1836-1904); Civil War veteran

Of Calvin Borthwick the following was written in Beers’s county history: “[He] is a farmer near Cornwallsville, and is a very useful man. His paternal ancestors were natives of Scotland; his maternal, of Connecticut. He was a soldier in the great civil war, and was possessed of inflexible patriotism and courage. He was entrusted with many difficult and dangerous expeditions. His wife was the daughter of Bela Smith Jr., who was an excellent man and a son of Rev. Bela Smith. Mr. Borthwick is a native of Schoharie County.”<sup>9</sup> Borthwick’s grave marker, which marks his gravesite and that of his wife, Mary Frances Smith (1838-1926), is of a simple type, consisting of a pyramidal base upon which rests a tablet with segmental-arched head.

Anson Strong (ca. 1777-1848); War of 1812 veteran, teacher, justice of the peace, town clerk

Anson Strong, a native of Durham, Connecticut, arrived in Durham, Greene County, prior to 1800; he was a soldier in the War of 1812, a district school teacher, and additionally served as a justice of the peace and as Town of Durham clerk. By Beers’s account, Strong “came about the year 1796, and bought the farm now occupied by his son, Ellsworth Strong Esq. He was a nephew of Selah Strong, who settled on Meeting-house Hill. He was well educated, and taught school 17 winters.”<sup>10</sup> Of the children he had with his wife, Sally Butler, his son Ellsworth was a justice of the peace while another son, Wilbur Fisk, died as a result of wounds received during the Civil War.<sup>11</sup> Borthwick, in his centennial history of the Cornwallville church, offered the following on Strong and his descendants: “The name of Strong has always been associated with the work of this church. Anson was the first of the name in this immediate vicinity – a nephew of Selah Strong, one of the first settlers in the town. Anson was well educated – a prominent characteristic of all the Strong’s... One son (Ellsworth) was steward for fifty years and church clerk for eleven years. Another son (John B. Strong) was a faithful and respected supporter of the church until his death at the early age of fifty-six years.”<sup>12</sup>

Smith Family

The surname Smith is well represented in the Cornwallville Cemetery, with over 100 burials being present. As noted by Borthwick, “The name of Smith is common the world over, but it is worthy of notice that the descendants of Thomas Smith who came here one hundred and thirty-three years ago have been strongly identified with this church both spiritually and officially through all its history, and about thirty per cent of the ministerial support of this church last year (1920-21) was contributed by the descendants of this man.”<sup>13</sup> The pioneer, Thomas Smith, was among the first settlers in the area, having come from Haddam, Connecticut. Of him the following account was offered in Beers’s county history: “He came to this town in 1788, and took up the farm now occupied by Embury Strong. In his youth he was a seafaring man, and became the commander of a vessel on the ocean. He went by the name Captain Smith. He had seven children, and their descendants are very numerous and influential. Quite a number became preachers and teachers. In fact, there are few families that have exerted so great or so good an influence in the town as the Smiths of Cornwallville.”<sup>14</sup>

Jerome Family

Fifteen members of the Jerome family are interred in the Cornwallville Cemetery; this family established itself in the hamlet during the 1810s. As noted by William S. Borthwick in his centennial history of the Methodist Church, “John Jerome came here from Delaware County in 1816, assisted very materially in building this church and was one of its first trustees. He and his wife, and eight children all sleep in our Cemetery, all having left their impress on the church life here in their day and generation; and his grandchildren, great-grandchildren and even great-great-grandchildren are now members of this church. One of his sons (Andrew) was Church Clerk for twenty-three years.”<sup>15</sup>

Funerary Art

The monuments that mark the graves within the Cornwallville Cemetery, while collectively modest in nature, are nevertheless significant for their representation of shifting tastes in funerary art from the early nineteenth century to present times. These earliest stones, dating to the 1820s, generally lack the design vocabulary characteristic of that period, during which time Neoclassical philosophies were transforming American art and architecture. Neoclassical imagery was not extensively employed on stones at the nominated cemetery, where the grave markers instead exhibit more restrained treatments, with simple name and date inscriptions. The mid-nineteenth century period is marked by modest cut-stone markers featuring raised inscriptions rendered on square or rectangular backgrounds and having flat, peaked, rounded or segmental-arched heads. Conspicuous from this period are a number of Egyptian-inspired obelisks and related variants, these being representative of the cemetery’s most highly developed nineteenth century markers. Nevertheless, more characteristic of this period and the ensuing era are the small or medium sized stones set on low bases with names rendered in raised letters against a recessed background, and outer edges sometimes defined by chamfering or other carved detailing. A variety of stones displaying some of these attributes are present and date from the third and last quarter of the nineteenth century. Also present are a number of polished granite markers, some with distinctive carved Neo-Grec detailing, and one cast-zinc marker.
