DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Huning Highlands district of Albuquerque is located between the railroad tracks and the sand hills at the edge of the flood plain of the Rio Grande; it lies north and south of Central Avenue (originally Railroad Avenue), the main east-west corridor of the city. When the subdivision was new in the 1880's, this avenue was more residential in character; from Iron, six blocks south of it, to Grand Avenue, three blocks north of Central, and from the railroad tracks on the west to the sand hills on the east, the neighborhood was home to many of the more prominent citizens of the city. The neighborhood was a mixture of large and small homes of various styles, which illustrate the history of the tastes and backgrounds of the residents who lived there. Increased commercial development and traffic along Central Avenue, and the conversion of Coal and Lead Avenues into one-way thoroughfares have divided the once integrally whole neighborhood into four isolated fragments.

About 1925 the neighborhood began to decline. Homeowners began to move to newer sections of the city and less permanent residents moved in. Many homes were rented out; larger homes were subdivided into apartments. The general upkeep of the neighborhood declined to the point that some units were vacated. Apartment complexes out of scale and character to the neighborhood started to replace them. Recently, however, the increased interest in the city's downtown neighborhoods and historic areas and the formation of a neighborhood association in the Huning Highlands have led to an increase in preservation/rehabilitation and owner-occupied units.

The more prominent and important structures are:

1. Albuquerque High School, Central and Broadway, N.E.; 1914-1938, red brick, Collegiate Gothic. A campus of five buildings.
2. Old Public Library, 1925-1947, Pueblo Revival.
3. Old Occidental Life Insurance building, Central and Broadway, S.E.; 1905, four-story brick building in the Chicago School style.
4. C. L. McClanahan House, 201 Arno S.E.; 1910, cast stone Queen Anne.
5. Jack Korber House, 301 Arno S.E.; 1916, a mixture of Prairie School, mission and bungalow.
6. A. B. McMillan House, 119 Walter S.E.; 1893-96, frame Queen Anne.
7. J. E. Learnard House, 210 Walter S.E.; prior to 1898, Queen Anne.
8. E. J. Alger House, 124 Walter S.E.; ca. 1900, Italianate.
9. D. A. Bittner House, 120 Walter S.E.; 1901, frame Dutch Colonial revival with gambrel roof.
10. H. G. Coors House, 116 Walter S.E.; ca. 1920, cast stone bungalow.
11. Mrs. Hill's Boarding House, 321 Walter S.E.; early 1890's, brick Victorian.

30. 201 Walter N.E.; ca. 1898, elaborate variation of Victorian cottage.
31. Mrs. T. I. Butts House, 201 High N.E.; ca. 1909, cast stone with frame pediment, Queen Anne.
32. F. J. Patchin House, 207 High N.E.; ca. 1905, Dutch Colonial revival.
33. 209 High N.E.; ca. 1913, cast stone bungalow.
34. A. E. Walker House, 202 High N.E.; ca. 1900, brick Period revival.
35. Regina Hall, 806 Grand N.E.; 1920's, brick, early Prairie School.

This lists some of the better structures; there are many more that are fine architectural examples of the period between 1885 and 1925.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The significance of the Huning Highlands neighborhood to the city lies chiefly in its historical background, architectural character, and location within the city. Its homes, lawns, trees, and its proximity to the downtown center set this neighborhood apart from the rest of the city's residential suburbs.

When the railroad first arrived in the Rio Grande Valley in 1880, the tracks were laid 2 miles east of the small Hispanic villa of Albuquerque, and a "new town" was built, reflecting in its architecture, platting, scale and tempo, the tastes and life styles of the "Anglo" midwesterners that came with it.

Unlike the villa, a small, quiet village of adobe houses, New Town was an expanding center whose brick, wood, and stone buildings reflected the new technologies imported by the railroad. Local building traditions were ignored in favor of the new sources which the railroad made available.

Huning Highlands gets its name from one of Albuquerque's early and most important pioneers, Franz Huning, a German immigrant who made New Mexico his home, establishing mercantile businesses first in Las Vegas, and then in Santa Fe, and finally in Albuquerque in the mid-1860's. By 1880 he was a prominent citizen with land holdings east of the town. Along with William Hazeldine and Elias Stover, he was instrumental in getting the railroad to establish their regional headquarters and shops at Albuquerque, by selling them the land for those purposes for one dollar. This assured the future of Albuquerque as an important commercial center for the surrounding region, and made Huning's name ever-significant in the city's growth and livelihood. Lands that Huning owned east of the railroad, he platted and sold as building lots; this was the beginning of the Huning Highlands subdivision, which continued to grow and develop up until about 1925. The subdivision, being east of the railroad tracks and separated by them from the commercial center of the new town and its other more closely related residential sections, became the early home for Albuquerque's more prominent business and professional citizens. It was the up-and-coming neighborhood; the place to live. Bankers, merchants, lawyers, doctors - and the town's first architect - built homes there.

The architectural environment of the Huning Highlands, including its streetscape and landscaping, is significant not only in its 19th and early 20th century styles of building, but also in its variety of scale. It is not a neighborhood of large mansions, overpowering in their monumentality, but one of a variety of substantial homes and modest cottages. Sizes vary from large to small; however, the overall scale of the community has a unity that no modern development seems able to achieve with monotonous repetition. Huning Highlands is rich in its variety and simplicity without being plain. Styles range from the early Victorian, Italianate, and Queen Anne styles of the 1880's and '90's, to the more modest period revival cottage styles of the early part of this century. During the 1920's the California bungalow became prominent, bringing with it a more horizontal quality to soften the verticality of earlier styles. Also, traditional southwestern cultural heritages such as Spanish (Mexican) and Pueblo Indian architecture became influential; these styles, with their unique qualities added further to the richness of the environment.

Many of the structures are of wood frame, horizontal siding with corner trim boards. In addition to wood, other structures are constructed with brick, windows graced with segmental arches, corners decorated with vertical dentals, adding the soft red color of brick to the streetscape. Cast stone also adds its own color and large textured scale to the variety of materials. To all these basic building materials add various roof pitches and styles, dormers, leaded windows, broad front porches with Doric columns, tall brick chimneys with a variety of capping patterns, warm stucco with Spanish tiles, and an array of decorative frieze boards, gable wall patterns and brick bracketry -- most of which came to the area over the railroad from eastern mail order houses -- and the result is a cultural and historical resource of great value to any city and worth conserving.

As the greater city of Albuquerque struggles to restore and conserve its historical and cultural heritage and to establish its present identity, the Huning Highlands district becomes very significant due to its great contribution to that heritage. As "Old Town" is recognized as the root community of Spanish origin and for its many contributions to the Spanish heritage, so Huning Highlands is recognized as Albuquerque's last remaining neighborhood that still shows clearly the heritage and culture contributed by the railroad to this region, being largely intact and minimally touched by modern development. If this period of Albuquerque's history is to be protected and sensitively developed, it will be best achieved within a Huning Highlands historic district.

Iron Avenue S.E.: Addresses in the 300-700 blocks.

Justification of boundary lines:

North boundary - The north boundary along Tijeras and Grand Avenues essentially repeats the original north boundary of the Huning Highlands Addition (drawn in 1882 along Tijeras Avenue which at that time ran northeast). The amended boundary lines exclude a block of intrusive temporary buildings which are part of the Old Albuquerque High School property.

Historically and presently the area to the north is sharply different in character; originally a neighborhood of small, mainly adobe, worker's homes known as Dog Town, the blocks of residential property between Grand Avenue and Lomas were demolished in an Urban Renewal project and have been replaced by modern public and private housing. Remaining buildings of historic character are along Grand Avenue itself - Longfellow School, built in 1927, and Old St. Joseph Hospital, built in 1929.

Regina Hall, the contributing structure in the district's northeast corner, is part of the St. Joseph's complex. The public scale of this dark brick two-story structure makes it an important visual anchor along the boundary.

As well as being a historically important north boundary, Grand Avenue is accepted by the neighborhood association and by the City of Albuquerque as the present north boundary of the district.

East boundary - The east boundary is drawn along Locust and Elm Streets; the original district boundary was at Elm Street (Hill Street in 1882). The blocks between Elm and Locust are part of the Terrace Addition, platted in 1891, and the significant and contributing buildings in these blocks mainly date from 1910 through 1925, and continue styles found elsewhere in the district.

Locust is the last street before the Interstate Highway, which makes a very definite visual boundary. Since these blocks are considered part of the neighborhood by the neighborhood association and by the city, and since they are connected in period and style, they should be included in the historic district.

South of Coal Avenue, the amended boundary cuts a block west to Elm Street to exclude two blocks of non-contributing buildings.

South boundary - The south boundary runs along the south property line of lots with frontage on Iron Avenue. The original south boundary of the Huning Highland Addition ran north and east from an acequia (irrigation ditch) on the west to intersect Iron Avenue at High Street on the east. This original line has been obscured by later platting. The proposed boundary line includes most plots in the original addition.

The south boundary line is least clear in terms of architectural distinctions or clear visual boundaries. As the earlier maps sent with the original nomination form show, most houses between Iron and Hazeldine qualify as contributing to a historic district. As one moves south from Iron Avenue, there is a slow progression to more recent housing in the South Broadway area which makes a clear line difficult to draw.

The boundaries of the present Huning Highland neighborhood, recognized by the city and by the neighborhood association, extend south only to Coal Avenue. The district boundary should be drawn further south, since a number of the district's earliest buildings were built in the blocks between Coal and Iron (in particular the Horner House, AX on the map, the earliest remaining house in the district). Making the south boundary correspond fairly closely to the original southern boundary of the Huning Highland addition therefore seemed the most logical course if we were not to propose an unworkably large historic district.

The area south of Iron Avenue may well qualify as a future historic district; our survey work will reveal the degree of integrity remaining there. There has been more visible deterioration and unsympathetic remodeling in this area than in the proposed district.

West boundary - The west boundary runs along Broadway, the alley west of Broadway, and John Street. The original boundary of the addition ran along the acequia, or irrigation ditch, west of Broadway; the proposed historic district boundary runs east of that line to exclude some non-contributing modern buildings.

The boundary along Broadway from Iron to Coal excludes an intrusive structure to the west of Broadway, but includes Creamland Dairy buildings (#87) which are also intrusive. Creamland Dairy is built on a block which once had a number of individual houses, and the possibilities of an eventual return to supportive uses and structures seems stronger if the block is included.

The boundary on the alley west of Broadway allows inclusion of one significant building, the Broadway Market (AO on map) and many contributing buildings. At Gold Avenue the boundary swings west to John Street, a through street only in this block, to include the significant Highland Hotel, an important marker of the west end of the district and a connection with the downtown area to the west. The boundary moves east again at Central Avenue to exclude the modern First Baptist Church and parking lots.

This is the most complex of the boundaries, but it does include all those buildings between the railroad tracks and Broadway which clearly form part of the district's character.

Cohesion and integrity along Central Avenue:

Clearly Central Avenue, which is Albuquerque's main east-west thoroughfare, has more non-contributing structures than any other part of the district.

ITEM NUMBER 10 PAGE 6

The cohesion of Central in the district's western half is well maintained by the impressive bulk of Albuquerque High School (A), the Highland Hotel (I) and the Old Public Library (D). On the eastern end, the district's identity is not as easily visible from Central, but is still asserted by the number of small contributing buildings along the street, as well as by the houses visible along side streets. Memorial Hospital (R) is a major visual contribution to the district at the eastern boundary.

Historically, Central Avenue has always been a commercial street, at least in part, so that commercial buildings along the street, even if non-contributing in scale and style, do continue the traditional uses. Current city plans to landscape the street, and neighborhood plans to work for neighborhood-focused uses and amenities will begin to reduce the degree of visual intrusion in the near future.

The motels and office buildings along Central in this district are at most two stories in height; their massing is uncharacteristic of historic buildings in Huning Highlands, but they do not completely mask contributing and significant buildings from view.

Cohesion and integrity along Broadway Boulevard:

The non-contributing buildings along Broadway Boulevard are mainly small commercial structures, different in style, but comparable in scale and massing to the contributing structures along the street. Only Creamland Dairy's buildings (#87) are intrusive in scale (see explanation of west boundary line). The primary visual impression along Broadway is made by the small homes and office buildings which are listed as contributing or significant, by the vacant lot at Broadway and Central which until recently contained a significant historic building, and by the Old High School (A). With the exception of Creamland Dairy's buildings, the integrity and cohesion of Broadway Boulevard has not been seriously disturbed by non-contributing structures.

Manual Arts Building, 1927, G. M. Williamson, architect
Classroom Building, 1937, L. G. Hesselden, architect; also Library Building, 1938.
"Collegiate Gothic Revival" brick school buildings; oldest still-standing public school structure in the city.
- B Auge Store, 214 Arno NE, ca. 1915.
Cast stone store and residence, noteworthy for large arched display windows; probably built by local stonemason Angelo de Tullio.
- C 204 Arno NE, ca. 1882.
Rare cobblestone house, patterned on houses in upper New York state; one of the earliest buildings in the district still standing. Notable for its well-proportioned plan somewhat obscured by a later addition.
- D Old Albuquerque Public Library, 423 Central NE, 1925-51
Outstanding example of early Spanish-Pueblo Revival style designed by Arthur Rossiter. Has sympathetic later additions. Recently restored; interior original decorative work by Gustave Baumann, well-known Taos School artist.
- E McQuade House, 201 Walter NE, 1901.
Highly decorated brick Victorian cottage, notable for raised brick courses and elaborate gazebo entry porch.
- F 201½ High NE, ca. 1895.
Small early commercial building and cottage; features Victorian brick Dutch-style parapet over central structure.
- G Mrs. T. I. Butts House, 201 High NE, 1909.
Cast stone residence with fine detailing in windows, interior woodwork and large polygonal tower.
- H F. J. Patchin House, 207 High NE, 1905-6.
Brick Dutch Colonial Revival residence. Notable for carefully crafted brick porch columns and segmental arches over windows.
- I Highland Hotel, 200-206 Central SE, ca. 1903-08.
One of few remaining brick commercial buildings from this period in the city. Exemplifies Chicago School of commercial architecture.
- J 108-110 Arno SE, ca. 1898.
Rectangular 3-story brick structure, built as a duplex. Early residents included several prominent city businessmen, one of them an early mayor. Decoration is sparse; includes a one-story classic columned porch across the front and two small matching third story gables at the back.
- K Plaza Escalante, 412-414 Central SE, ca. 1895.
Small white painted brick symmetrical cottage with noteworthy Ionic columns on the now-enclosed porch and elaborate plaster decoration on the pediments.

- L A. B. McMillan House, 119 Walter SE, 1893-1896.
Queen Anne style house featuring decorated dormers, a two-story porch with Queen Anne turned wood posts on the first floor and classic columns on the second story porch, Palladian window, bracketed roof.
- M P. G. Cornish House, 123 Walter SE, ca. 1900.
Late Queen Anne brick house featuring a Mansard-style roof and wide coved cornice.
- N H. G. Coors House, 116 Walter SE, ca. 1920.
Cast stone bungalow, notable for graceful eyebrow dormer vents across front roof slope and careful carpentry work at front entrance.
- O D. A. Bittner House, 120 Walter SE, ca. 1900.
Frame Dutch Colonial Revival home with Queen Anne details, notably the octagonal tower by the front entrance.
- P E. J. Alger House, 124 Walter SE, ca. 1900.
Two-story brick house with Italianate details, including bracketed roof overhang and two square towers.
- Q John Hazeldine House, 123 High SE, ca. 1900.
Two-story brick-veneered house, notable for decorative brick work.
- R Memorial Hospital, 806 Central SE, 1926.
Formerly a hospital for Santa Fe Railroad employees, this building is now a public hospital. Built in a Mediterranean style with classic details such as the elaborate balustrade and swag decorations.
- S 216 Broadway SE, ca. 1900.
Small, two-story, brick home notable for elaborate contrasting brick decoration.
- T 222 Broadway SE, ca. 1895.
Small, red brick Victorian cottage with hexagonal porch as an early addition.
- U McClanahan House, 201 Arno SE, 1910.
Well-kept cast stone house with half timbered gables.
- V 202 Edith SE, ca. 1900.
Brick Victorian cottage with large wrap-around Queen Anne porch, elaborate chimneys, contrasting brickwork.
- W Boatright House, 220 Edith SE, 1888.
Two-story brick Victorian house with Queen Anne porch featuring decorated gable over porch entrance. Early mayor of Albuquerque lived here 1913-16.
- X Edward Buxton Cristy House, 201 Walter SE, 1896.
Unique, architect-designed frame cottage featuring octagonal rooms, "porthole" windows. Original architect-owner designed pueblo remodeling of University of New Mexico's Hodgin Hall (on National Register) and many early city schools.
- Y G. E. Brewer House, 215 Walter SE, pre-1900.
Queen Anne style house notable for elaborate shingling, gambrel roof.

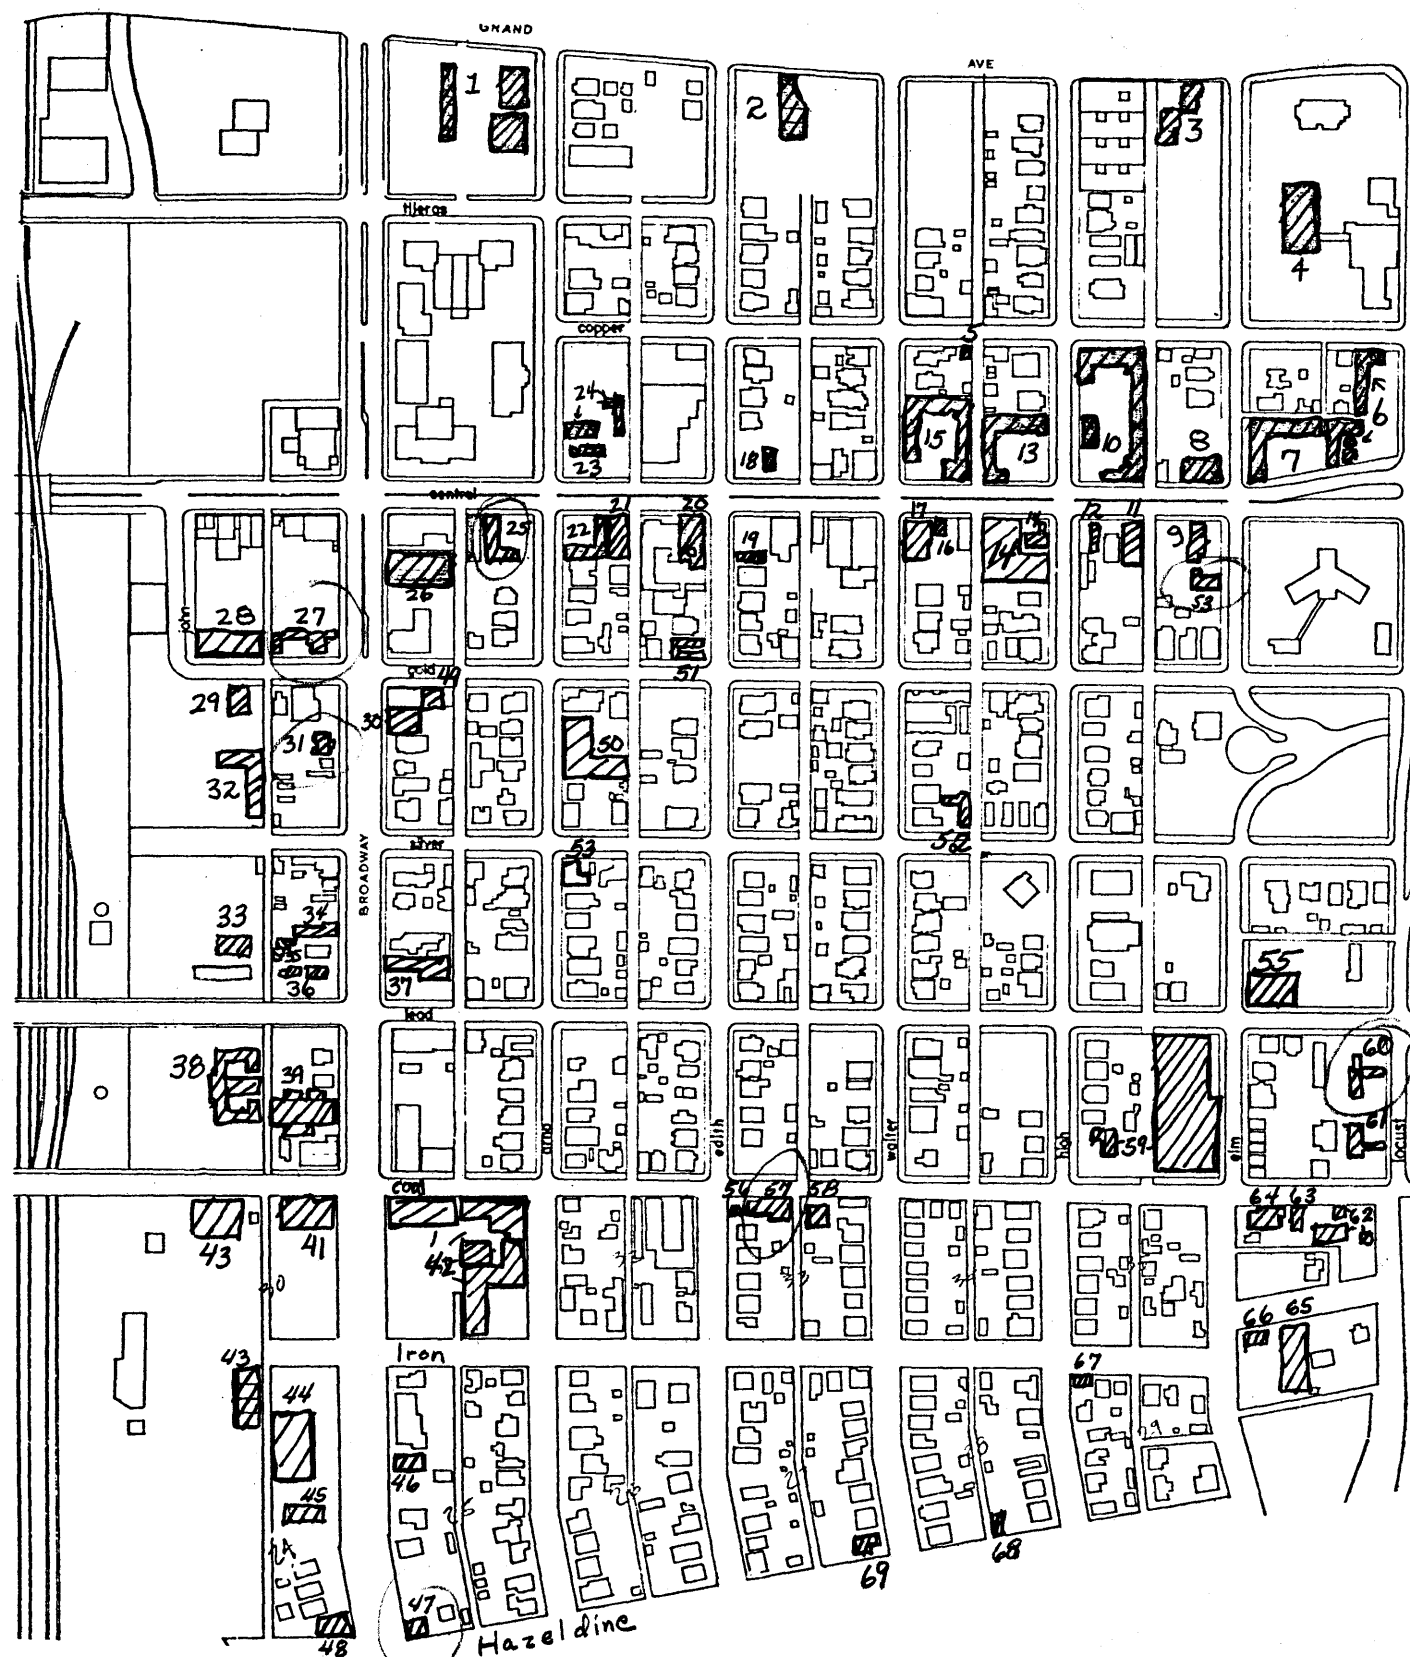

- Z Learnard House, 210 Walter SE, ca. 1898.
Excellent example of Queen Anne style featuring elaborate gable decorations, three-story tower north of front entrance and wrap-around decorated front verandah. Brick and shingle.
- AA Tubercular cottages, 615, 617, 619 Silver SE and 223 High SE, ca. 1910.
Small, one-story cottages featuring large windows placed on facing walls to facilitate air movement thought beneficial to the many tuberculosis patients who came to Albuquerque in the first decades of this century seeking a cure. Brick, frame, cast stone.
- AB 210 High SE, ca. 1895.
Well-maintained one-story brick cottage with spindle post porch. Good example of this square style of which there are only a few in the area.
- AC Whittlesey House, 201 Highland Park Circle SE, ca. 1903.
Log bungalow designed and originally owned by Charles Whittlesey, architect of the Alvarado Hotel in Albuquerque and the El Tovar on the South Rim of the Grand Canyon. Designed to resemble a Norwegian villa. Log building to the west, now an apartment, was the original stable.
- AD Korber House, 301 Arno SE, 1916.
Well-maintained structure designed in a combination of Prairie and Mission styles; one of the last large homes built in the district. Owner was prominent hardware merchant; he included many of the latest "gadgets" in the house.
- AE Seth House, 322 Arno SE, ca. 1883.
Early simple frame home, notable for its elaborate scrollwork on porch and gable.
- AF W. J. Marsh House, 301 Edith SE, ca. 1895.
Excellent example of two-story Victorian cottage; unaltered and very well-maintained. Brick.
- AG Charles E. Boldt House, 323 Edith SE, ca. 1904.
Unique combination of Dutch Colonial Revival and classic details. Frame.
- AH 502 Silver SE, ca. 1910.
One and a half story cast stone house, notable for cast stone dormers.
- AI 320 Edith SE, ca. 1903.
Unique brick cottage featuring hipped roofed two-story cube instead of usual one-story gabled front wing.
- AJ 317 Walter SE, ca. 1900.
Good example of elaborate Victorian cottage, notable for decorated gable ends.
- AK Mrs. Hill's Boarding House, 321 Walter SE, ca. 1895.
Eclectic two-story brick Victorian house featuring elaborate segmental arches, sawn ornaments, windows on different levels, bay window.
- AL Whitney House, 302 Walter SE, 1907.
Fine example of World's Fair Classic style, featuring Doric-columned porch, stepped parapet and denticulated and bracketed metal cornice.

- AM A. J. Mize House, 306 Walter SE, 1907.
One-story Victorian cottage featuring square entrance tower and decorative denticulated moldings.
- AN Mary S. Strong House, 802 Silver SE, 1910-11.
Wood California bungalow similar in design to Greene and Greene homes. Unique in Albuquerque.
- AO Broadway Market, 423 Broadway SE, ca. 1910.
Two-story red brick home and store, notable for concrete covered semi-circular brick arches over its windows. TV star Vivian Vance lived here as a child.
- AP 411 Arno SE, pre-1896.
Narrow brick simplified Queen Anne townhouse; built to house Harvey House employees. Features two-story bay window and sawn wood ornament.
- AQ omitted
- AR C. E. Vaughn House, 423 Arno SE, ca. 1900.
One-and-a-half story brick and frame house featuring Queen Anne elements - Palladian motif window, elaborate double brick segmental arch over south window, gable decorations, corner polygonal verandah.
- AS 419 Edith SE, ca. 1903.
Frame Queen Anne style house; notable for elaborate sawn wood decoration, oriel window on south facade.
- AT J. L. Durling House, 410 Edith SE, ca. 1894.
Only Albuquerque example of Stick Style design. Features typical exterior framing, gable end decorations, narrow clapboard and steep proportions.
- AU Murphey Sanitorium, 801 Coal SE, 1916.
Basically unaltered TB sanitorium of the type common in Albuquerque in early part of 20th century. Group of eleven frame and stucco buildings; includes main building (in unornamented simplified Prairie style) and cottages.
- AV Horner House, 520 Arno SE, 1881.
Earliest known house in district; balloon frame with Classic Revival pediments over the windows, roof dormers and bay windows.
- AW 501 High SE, ca. 1900.
An unaltered example of the Victorian cottage style common in the Huning Highlands district; features shingled front gable, classic columned porch and traditional L-shape.
- AX 602 Arno SE, ca. 1901.
Two-story frame house featuring bracketed roof overhang, elaborate shingling in north gable.
