Floors of main floor are oak with inlaid borders of dark wood.

To the right of entrance double sliding doors open to the living room.

The living room - the size of two rooms - is divided into two parts by an archway with flanking Doric columns. Panelled wood wainscot lines up with window stools, and a moulded cornice and frieze extends down to the window heads. Walls are paper over wood lath and plaster. Fireplace with hard maple and mirror mantel at end of room.

To the left of the entrance matching sliding doors open to what originally was a library and reception room, but now used as an office. Treatment is similar to living room.

Dining room has six-foot high panelled wood wainscot with plate rail, coffered beam ceiling, wallpaper above wainscot, and a fireplace with brick mantel.

All main rooms have cast plaster center medallions and combination gas and electric lighting fixtures.

A continuing restoration program is in progress with a sympathetic consideration for the original decor.

The mansion is sited on a shelf excavated from the side of a hill with a gently sloping park-like foreground extending to the street which is fenced off by an ornamental iron fence. The front of the building is oriented to the northeast; but, it appears, more importantly toward the water front so that Mr. Fernandez could retire to the tower and oversee all that was going on at the busy docks and warehouses, and his other enterprises spread along the water front and Southern Pacific tracks.

No. 8. Significance (continued) (Page 2)

No other family in the city has contributed as much to the history, growth and development of Pinole. In addition, the growth of Western Contra Costa County is also linked to the Fernandez complex as was the waterborne trade pattern and routes of the Bay Area in general in the mid and late 1800's.

The Fernandez Mansion and grounds today remain as the earliest and one of the last vestiges of the City's heritage still left standing.
