The Maggie L. Walker home at 110A East Leigh Street was built around 1909. It is a large two story brick residence with a quarter basement available for use. The walls of the home are painted dark red. The roof structure is modified mansard at the front of the residence. The remainder is flat with a slight slope for proper drainage. The roof is covered with slate on the mansard portion and heavy gauge tin on the remainder. A recent expert appraisal noted there were no leaks. Gutters and downspouts are galvanized with some in need of repairs. Double hung windows are features of the house except on the sun porch. The foundation is brick over poured concrete.

The residence has eighteen rooms with three and one-half baths. Interior floors are hardwood downstairs and solid pine upstairs. Bathroom floors and walls are of ceramic tile. Walls and ceilings of the interior are of plaster. The heating system is oil fired hot water. The boiler is located in the basement along with the gas fired hot water heater.

At the rear of the residence is a brick garage with four additional rooms above the garage. Between the garage and the residence is a two landing elevator shaft, with elevator (Mrs. Walker, a paraplegic, used this elevator). The residence and garage cover the entire 33 foot X 136 foot lot with the exception of a four foot side alley on the east side of the residence from the street to the garage.

The neighborhood is currently fifty percent residential, but is moving toward general business. The Walker home is within three blocks of the former Saint Luke Penny Savings Bank and both are near Broad Street, Richmond's main thoroughfare, and within six blocks of Richmond's ($24,000,000) Coliseum.

Maggie Lena Walker was born July 15, 1867, in Richmond, Virginia. She was the daughter of an ex-house slave, Elizabeth Draper, and of a northern abolitionist author, Ecles Cuthbert. As a child she attended the public schools of Richmond and in 1883 she graduated from Richmond's Armstrong Normal School. Later she enrolled in post high school courses in accounting and in salesmanship. This part-time additional study was undertaken during the three years she was employed as a public school teacher.

Mrs. Walker became intensely active in church and fraternal work early in life. At the age of eleven she was a member of the First African Baptist Church. During her high school years she worked as an agent for an insurance company. She also joined the Grand United Order of Saint Luke which had been founded in 1867 as a fraternal, cooperative, and insurance venture for blacks.

Following her marriage in 1886, Mrs. Walker devoted her efforts to the rearing of two sons and to the promotion of the Independent Order of Saint Luke, whose executive secretary-treasurer she became in 1899.

Through capable and dynamic leadership Mrs. Walker moved the organization that was once near failure to a position of leadership among black fraternal orders. It was stated of Mrs. Walker's achievement in Notable American Women, 1607–1960:

In twenty-five years the organization grew from 57 local chapters to 1,500, from 3,400 members to over 50,000 from an indebtedness of some $400.00 to assets of nearly $400,000 from a single clerk working in antiquated quarters to a staff of fifty in a modern four story office building.

In 1903 Mrs. Walker led the order into the banking business with the establishment of the Saint Luke Penny Savings Bank, thus becoming the first American woman known to establish and head a bank. She was president of the bank until 1930 when she became chairman of the board of directors, serving in that capacity until her death, December 15, 1934.

SIGNIFICANCE - page two

Through her direction the bank survived the stringent regulations imposed by the State of Virginia in 1910 and subsequent years. In 1931 the Saint Luke Bank and Trust Company, the Second Street Bank and Trust Company, and the Mechanics Bank and Trust Company merged to form the Consolidated Bank and Trust Company. The Saint Luke Bank, which was the most stable of the three, became the core of the new institution. It is significant that this bank was one of those that withstood the impact of the depression.

Despite the heavy demands made on her time by the bank, Mrs. Walker remained intensely active with the Independent Order of Saint Luke. She was founder and president of the Richmond Council of Colored Women, guiding this council in a drive to raise thousands of dollars to assist the Virginia Industrial School for Colored Girls. Her fund-raising energies were also used on behalf of the black tuberculosis sanatorium at Burkeville, Virginia. In Richmond she worked for the establishment of a black community center and for better health care for blacks, while serving on the boards of civic and educational institutions.

Maggie Lena Walker is of national historical significance because she was the first woman known to be president of an American bank. Through her leadership and sound banking principles she made St. Luke a formidable black bank which survived new State banking regulations of 1910 and the Great Depression of the 1930s. She was also the founder of the Richmond Council of Colored Women.
